For Ike
A Clean Choice

It was a decision a military man could see.

And, while of course he regretted having to make it, it is quite easy to believe that Dwight D. Eisenhower was glad to have before him an issue which fitted into the experience and knowledge gained by a lifetime of weighing the pros and cons.

There was no other course but to move into Lebanon.

The one question was when.

It is known that as late as 10 p.m. the evening before the British were glad. They did not believe the United States would act. They had concluded there would be a protest, a delay, and another appeal to the U.N.

It also is known that the Turks, always blunt and to the point, were making the wires hum with requests to act and offers to join in.

But, as night closed over the capital, and midnight drew near, Dwight D. Eisenhower had made up his mind. The great decision had been made. Already the orders were going out in code.

Decision

Here was a place, and a time, when he could act without the nagging delays of congressional procedure and committee hearings. One can imagine that, while grieved at the necessity of it, he enjoyed the moment of decision for its cleanliness of choice.

It was not an easy choice.

It has certain very definite assets and liabilities.

But, it is the beginning of a new policy. It replaces one which was bankrupt. It is strength, where the old one was weakness. It brings new dangers, but they are not greater than the old ones.

Let us look at it—

NATO will be the stronger in fact and in spirit. There is no denying the President had lost stature. The members of the NATO had lost faith in him. Enmeshed in domestic politics, mired deep by the failure of his organization and the astonishing folly of Sherman Adams, the image of Dwight Eisenhower had been eroded to the point where he seemed to many as a weak man unable to make up his mind or act forthrightly.

The Russians, with others, so believed.

So, they moved covertly in the Middle East, where they now are a power. Let us not be so naive, or commit ourselves to the folly of believing it is all communism in the Middle East. There exists a strong, fantastic commitment to Arab unity. The old dream of a long-subject people recalls the legends of Moslem power, of armies which drove to the gates of Vienna and once had the world almost within their grasp.

Emotional

It is strong drink which Nasser gives them—all the Arabian Peninsula united as members of an Arab Republic. The Communist technique is to join and support such a movement. This they had done so well they are counted as partners. They provide the money, the techniques, the tricks of subversion.

The old image of the Commander in Chief is back with us again. The swift action showed planning and comprehension. It began a new policy. It is refreshing.

Turkey, Iran and Saudi Arabia are strengthened.

There is confidence again in the Western giant.

The President has shown that he knows how to use the great powers of his office. He showed this at Little Rock, though prejudice and enmity have obscured it, when he sent troops not to enforce desegregation per se, but to uphold the dignity of a court of laws faced with mob defiance. Perhaps now he will move, despite the entanglements of politics, with more assurance in even more domestic affairs.

There are liabilities. We must accept the fact that we are labeled as imperialists. There is no way out of it. If this be the price we must pay it and allow the new policy to develop.

Prime Minister Nasser, of Egypt, and the rebels in Iraq, must see that if the United Nations will come to protect the independence of member governments, the U.S. Marines will depart. The canal will pay profits. The oil will flow.

The President will be wise to keep hammering at this point—the Marines are there only until the U.N. comes.

Anyhow, it is good to have the old Ike image back again.

Public Probe Is Promised By Lawson

Roger H. Lawson said Wednesday he plans to conduct public hearings soon on his investigation of alleged government wrongdoing. He declined to say definitely whether or not Lt. Gov. Vandiver would be asked to testify.

Lawson, appointed chief state investigator by Gov. Griffin, outlined general plans for his inquiry when asked by reporters about a widespread report that he planned to issue a subpoena for Vandiver, a candidate for governor.

"I have no definite plans for subpoenaing anyone at the moment," Lawson said.

He would comment no further on the report that Vandiver would be called before him. According to the report, Vandiver would be quizzed about his speech last Saturday that was critical of the Griffin administration.

Lawson said he is currently engaged in interviewing prospective staff members for his investigation. His staff so far consists of himself and a secretary.

As for his future plans, Lawson said he has in mind "a series of public hearings" to be given probably within the next few weeks. He apparently plans to

43 Long Distance Calls to Adams In 6 Months Admitted by Goldfine

WASHINGTON (AP)—Bernard Goldfine acknowledged Wednesday telephoning Sherman Adams "a friend you call whenever you see fit"—43 times in six months.

But the wealthy Boston industrialist continued mum on some matters, despite more warnings of possible contempt action from a special House investigating subcommittee.

Goldfine, in the witness chair for the seventh and supposedly next-to-last time, described as correct a record of 43 long-distance calls he placed to Adams, President Eisenhower's No. 1 aide. The record showed the calls were made to the White House, Adams' private number and, on one occasion, to Minneapolis when Adams was traveling.

The record covered the period from Nov. 20, 1957 to May 11, 1958, and thus amounted to almost two calls weekly on an average.

"I consider Gov. Adams one of my best friends," Goldfine said. "A friend you call whenever you see fit . . . and he does the same to you."

While the subcommittee neared the end of its marathon questioning of Adams' gift-giving friend—and presumably approached a decision on a contempt citation—the House itself exploded into a new row over the investigators' tactics.

The immediate issue was a bitter protest by Rep. Perkins Bass (R-NH) against the mention by subcommittee Chairman Owen Harris (D-Ark.) of a name identical with Bass' in connection with a company Harris said was a party in a case of apparent politi-

Russell Disturbed But Backs Troop Use

WASHINGTON—Sen. Russell (D-Ga.) Wednesday voiced some misgivings about the use of American military force in Lebanon but said that "When U.S. troops are committed, all we can do is support our commander in chief."

Russell said he had expressed his misgivings at a White House meeting, but "now that the (American) flag is there (in Lebanon), there is nothing to do but for us to unite."

C.N. Ragsdale Dies at 68 After Stroke

Clifford N. Ragsdale, 68, one of the South's leading livestock dealers and son of a former Atlanta mayor and Fulton County commissioner, died Wednesday in an Atlanta hospital.

He was hurried to the hospital after suffering a stroke. Death came soon after he was admitted.

He was president of Ragsdale-Lawson Co. of Atlanta, and was a partner in the Ragsdale-McClure Co. of Rome and the Northeast Georgia Livestock Co. of Athens. He served as president of the Georgia Livestock Operators Assn.

He was engaged in many fraternal and charitable activities. He was a member of W. D. Luckie Lodge, F&AM; a Scottish Rite Mason, and a member of Yaarab Temple Shrine. During World War I he served as a sergeant in the remount depot No. 316.

He was a member of the first

Reinforced Marines Go Into Beirut

By SAM POPE BREWER

(Copyright 1958, The New York Times Co.) BEIRUT, Lebanon, July 16—U.S. Marines moved from Khaldé airport into the city of Beirut today and occupied strategic points against possible rebel attack.

Tonight there was a large amount of small arms fire in the city but as far as could be learned none was directed at the marine posts. It is understood they have orders to hit back hard at anybody who attacks them.

Adm. James Holloway, commanding the operation, said tonight his mission was to insure the safety of the port area and of the airport and of communications between those points.

TOLD CORRESPONDENTS

Admiral Holloway told U.S. correspondents he intended to move his command ship U.S.S. Taconic into Beirut harbor tomorrow.

The admiral said the total number of marines ashore now was 3,500, including the battalion that landed this morning. He declined to say when or where the third battalion of his force would land.

Asked what his men would do if fired upon, Holloway said "The first law in any military organization is self-protection."

He stressed the fact all American personnel had been informed they were landing in a friendly country at the request of its government to support that government.

SECURE COMMUNICATION

Explaining their moves up to now, he said the first step in any operation was to secure the primary means of communication.

He said he was unable to discuss what further steps might be planned. He would not say anything on the question of whether U.S. troops might be used to police the Lebanese borders to prevent infiltration of arms and men from Syria.

The admiral denied a report that there had been another

Ike Sends Murphy to Lebanon

Lloyd and Dulles Ready To Confer

By DANA ADAMS SCHMIDT

(Copyright 1958, The New York Times Co.) WASHINGTON—President Eisenhower sent Deputy Undersecretary Robert Murphy to Lebanon as his special political representative Wednesday.

The White House and State Department meanwhile prepared for talks with British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd, who will arrive here from London Thursday morning.

Secretary of State Dulles and Lloyd will confer future political and military action of the United States and the United Kingdom during their talks on the "critical position" in the Middle East, officials said.

APPEAL FOR JORDAN

An appeal to the two governments for support of the Jordanian government in its efforts to restore the sovereignty of the Arab Union of Iraq and Jordan in Iraq is expected shortly.

Officials at the Jordanian embassy Wednesday exhibited confidence unwarranted by the situation in their country. The conclusion drawn by neutral diplomats is that if Jordan asks for assistance she will get it.

Murphy in Lebanon and American officials conferring with Lloyd here will face the big question of what further military moves, if any, should be made beyond the Middle East. In particular, they will have to consider whether British paratroopers should be used to consolidate Jordan against the menace of another pro-Nasser rebellion, and whether Jordan can become a bridgehead to reverse the Iraq revolt.

SOVIET WARNINGS

The U.S. government reacted coolly meanwhile to Soviet warnings that it could not stand by as

Iraqi 'People' Killed Faisal, Baghdad Says

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP)—King Faisal died at the hands of the Iraqi people, Baghdad radio announced Wednesday.

The radio said the King, Crown Prince Abdul Ilah and Premier Nuri Said all were slain by the Iraqi people.

Previous reports had said Faisal and Ilah were killed when the crown prince ordered palace guards to fire on army officers who tried to negotiate with the King early Monday.

(This is the first direct report from Baghdad on the King's death. The same report was received earlier in the day at Tehran from the Iranian ambassador in Baghdad. This dispatch was filed by a part-time correspondent, an Iraqi national. American correspondents have been unable to enter Iraq.)

Jordan King Pledges To Retaliate in Iraq

By OSGOOD CARUTHERS

(Copyright 1958 by The New York Times Co.) CAIRO—King Hussein of Jordan pledged Wednesday to retaliate against the "mutiny in the Iraqi part of the Arab Union."

Broadcasting the official royal announcement over the Amman radio, the Jordanian monarch warned the rebels in Baghdad, who have ousted his cousin, King Faisal, proclaimed a new Iraqi republic and declared an end of the Iraqi-Jordanian Union, that they would be held responsible for any harm done to the Iraqi royal family or to Jordanian citizens.

Hussein has refused to accept the disruption of the Arab Union that was formed only during the last several weeks under the Hashemite monarchy. He has proclaimed himself head of the union

Russia Veto In Council Is Certain

Only Solution, Lodge Insists

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—The United States held firm Wednesday against mounting pressure spearheaded by the Soviet Union for withdrawal of U.S. Marines from Lebanon.

U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge insisted in the 11-nation Security Council only an international military force can supplant the Marines in the little revolt-torn Middle East country.

ACTION POSTPONED

The Council postponed action until 2 p.m. Thursday on a U.S. resolution authorizing creation of the international force to protect Lebanon's independence from subversion by President Nasser's United Arab Republic.

A Soviet veto appeared certain. There was no prospect that the Council would approve a rival Soviet resolution urging immediate withdrawal of the Marines.

Neutral Sweden also questioned the necessity of sending U.S. military forces into Lebanon. Ambassador Gunnar V. Jarring suggested that the activities of the U.N. observer group be suspended while the Marines are there.

OUTSIDE AID

He said Sweden believes the presence of the Marines makes it impossible for the observers to carry out their duties of preventing outside aid from reaching Lebanese rebels.

Soviet Delegate Arkady A. Sobolev read to the Council Wednesday an official Kremlin statement urging the removal of the Marines and warning that the Soviet Union reserves freedom of action in an area deemed vital to Soviet security.

Lodge promptly made this reply: "We would like nothing better than to withdraw, as I have

Intervening Supported By NATO

India Hostile, Japan Worried

(Copyright 1958, The New York Times Co.) The permanent council of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization meeting in Paris indicated Wednesday general approval of the U.S. intervention in Lebanon but reaction in world capitals was generally marked by anxiety and criticism.

The council met for the second successive day to hear reports on the Middle East action from Ambassador W. Randolph Burgess, U.S. permanent representative. The general tenor of comments supported Washington's decision to intervene, according to diplomatic sources.

In New Delhi, pronounced anti-American sentiment and a deep sense of fear of the prospects of a world war characterized the mood of the people.

Some members of parliament, officials, leaders of non-Communist political parties and students unanimously denounced the U.S. military intervention in Lebanon.

Some important politicians who are generally friendly toward the United States expressed a sense of regret that President Eisenhower should have committed such a "grievous blunder" as military intervention in the Middle East. They said this development was bound to produce hostility toward the United States in India and in other Asian countries.

NEHRU HURRIES BACK

Prime Minister Nehru, who went Tuesday to Allahabad, his home town, on a four-day visit to study the deteriorating food situation, has canceled the rest of his program and is returning to the capital Thursday morning instead of Friday. He told a meeting of Congress Party workers that a "dangerous situation" had developed in the Middle East.

"The world is going toward danger very rapidly and if something happened no country in the world can escape its repercussions," he was reported to have said.

The Japanese government in Tokyo expressed misgivings over the U.S. action.

A statement from Foreign Minister Aichihiro Fujiyama said the U.S. move "may make a peaceful settlement of the situation more difficult." No reference to Iraq was contained in the statement but Chief Cabinet Secretary Mune-nori Akagi told Japanese newsmen that the government was also opposed to intervention in Iraq by the United States, the Soviet Union or any other foreign power.

INTERNAL AFFAIR

Public expression of Japanese differences with Washington on the Middle East crisis followed lengthy consultations Wednesday between Fujiyama, Prime Minister Nobusuke Kishi and foreign office experts, including the Japanese ambassadors to the United States, the United Arab Republic and Russia.

In London, the Yugoslav ambassador to Britain criticized the intervention in Lebanon. He held that the problems affecting Lebanon were internal ones and said it would have been much better to let the people there settle them.

Ivo Vojvoda gave his views when he was questioned after a speech at the luncheon of the Association of American Correspondents in London.

He said fighting had been going on in Lebanon for three months and that during that time the world had "more or less" accepted that it was an internal problem. He said he thought the United States government had accepted this view.

Poland's official Communist party newspaper said the United States' landings had brought about the threat of war.

Paris Ready To Join U.S. In Lebanon

PARIS (UPI)—Gen. Charles de Gaulle conferred urgently with his military chiefs Wednesday while another French warship sailed for the eastern Mediterranean to join French naval units off the coast of Lebanon.

De Gaulle's announced policy was one of "wait and see," but he was reported ready to send French troops into Lebanon if necessary to back up the U. S. Marines there. However, it was understood France would act only if Britain does too.

Urgent diplomatic consultations were underway here, in London and in Washington to plan concerted allied action to meet the new challenge to the West.

The destroyer Kersaint sailed from Toulon Wednesday to join the French carrier Lafayette, the cruiser De Grasse and three destroyers off the Lebanese coast. The De Grasse is carrying 900 sailors who would serve as a landing force if needed. In addition, the supply ship La Baise was scheduled to join the east Mediterranean task force.

Civil Board For Space Is Approved

WASHINGTON (AP)—The House and Senate in quick succession passed by voice votes and sent to the White House Wednesday a bill to create a new civilian space agency.

The agency would be under the direct control of the President. He would be advised by a council composed of eight members in addition to himself, including three experts not in the federal government.

GROWING PROBLEMS

The bill gives President Eisenhower just about what he asked of Congress in a new agency to coordinate the nation's growing problems of non-military space exploration.

The new agency would take over and expand the 47-year-old National Advisory Committee on Aeronautics, which now coordinates advanced flight research.

NATIONAL DEFENSE

The bill makes provision for the military to control space activities connected with national defense.

Meanwhile, Pentagon space experts told the Senate Appropriations Committee there is a need for money to push space explorations both in the military and civilian fields.

"We are under orders to catch up with the Russians in this work," said Roy W. Johnson, director of the Defense Department's Advanced Research Projects Agency.

U.N. Probers Assail Red Killings Of Nagy, 29 Other Hungarians

By LINDESA PARROTT

(Copyright 1958, The New York Times Co.) UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.—The U.N. special committee Wednesday sharply accused the Communist government of Hungary of violating the U.N. charter and the Declaration of Human Rights by the continued trials and executions of men and women who participated in the 1956 revolt. A list of 30 death sentences was cited.

The committee's report was issued after a series of meetings, which began last month when the Hungarian regime announced the execution of former Premier Imre Nagy, Gen. Pal Maleter and other leaders of the revolt.

The committee concluded that the executions of Nagy and Maleter "are striking but, unhappily not isolated, examples of the continued policy of repression carried out at the present time in Hungary."

It expressed the hope that "the government of the Hungarian Peoples' Republic, hearing the voice of public opinion in many countries, will cease carrying out new death sentences and, bringing to an end the present harsh repression, will effectively reestablish the inalienable principles of human rights."

Some diplomatic circles considered the committee's new report considerably stronger than the interim finding it issued June 21.

At least inferentially, the new report accused the pro-Soviet regime of Premier Janos Kadar

Cuba Rebels To Release 4 a Day

18 U.S. Hostages In Castro's Hands

(Copyright 1958, The New York Times Co.) By PETER KIHSS

GUANTANAMO NAVAL BASE, Cuba—Naval authorities said Wednesday the Cuban rebels had advised them that the remaining kidnapped U.S. servicemen would be released at a rate of only four daily.

The message was received from Consul Park F. Wollam, who is in the mountains, after Tuesday's release of a first group of seven servicemen and one Cuban employee of the base who had been kidnapped June 27 from a liberty bus.

Three Navy and one Marine, enlisted men, were released Wednesday.

Eighteen servicemen and a Cuban bus driver remain in the hands of rebels led by Raul Castro.

The impression here was that the releases were being stretched out by the rebels for military reasons to protect them from a resumption of aerial bombings by Cuban government forces. The Cuban army has maintained a de facto truce during the rescue negotiations. It is also understood that the rebels have been building up military strength.

The servicemen released Tues-

Nevertheless, one American with a military background who has recently been among the rebels expressed doubt that the rebels could launch any major offensive against the Cuban army. The servicemen snatched from the bus reported they had all been kept together in long marches that entailed hiking a total of 80 miles as well as other long treks by jeep.

Atomic Triggers Are Cocked and Ready

Events are moving somberly, swiftly and remorselessly in the great struggle of world powers brought on by overthrow of the government in Iraq.

Russia has demanded an immediate withdrawal of U.S. Marines from Lebanon. She states she will not stand "idly by" if we do not remove them.

A serious blow, somehow buried in the headlines of troop landings, was the statement by U.N. Secretary Dag Hammarskjöld that U.S. troops were not needed in Lebanon to protect the borders from rebel infiltration.

This was easily the most disturbing note of the day, since one of the basic reasons for our entry was to be there until a U.N. force could do the job. Secretary Hammarskjöld's statement does not jibe with earlier reports by U.N. observers of large bodies crossing the border. The observers were unable to identify them but that they were Syrian troops, dispatched by Egypt, cannot be doubted.

Major basis of our landing is that the government, with which we have a treaty, requested our aid.

But let none be naive enough not to understand.

We are in Lebanon in an attempt to contain the spread of Russian-supported Arab nationalism. The Middle East is a critical area, not merely because its oil sustains much of the world's economy but it also is a strategic area of vital importance. If Nasser and the Arabs were acting independently in forming a union, few would object. We would not. Indeed, we are well aware officially that troops will not halt the dynamic emotionalism of Arab nationalism. We regret seeming to be against it.

We would not be if it were not Russian-bound, Russian-supported and Russian-directed. If it succeeds it will be Russia who controls the Middle East—and thereby becomes the most powerful force on earth—if that nationalism is not now contained.

The next few days may see Russia withdraw from the United Nations.

The next few days may see, although this is doubted, Communist "volunteers" from China thrown into the area. To do this the Russians would have to violate some frontier of Turkey or Iran.

But the next few days will see Britain and the United States muster a striking force. So will Turkey.

The atomic triggers are cocked.

Let none fail to understand that all the old policies are out the window. When our troops moved into Lebanon a new policy began.

Events are on the move. It is not possible to fix them and analyze them. There are too many imponderables. But there is hardly a chance that the United States, whatever the U.N. says, will now retreat.

Whoever controls the Middle East will hold the balance of power.

We would not mind an Arab Union. But we very much mind a Russian Middle East.

So the atomic triggers are cocked. If the Russians move in aggression they will be pulled. That the Russians know this, or soon will, is the best guarantee against war. Unless, of course, the Kremlin wants it.

Executive Order Ringed By Aroma of Hypocrisy

A week ago today Gov. Griffin indicated at his press conference that he would send his aide and brother, Cheney, home to Bainbridge if he is in violation of an executive order banning state employees from seeking public office.

The order stated quite plainly that "any state officer, agent or employee who seeks election to any public office must immediately resign from his position or job with the State of Georgia."

But Cheney Griffin, candidate for the House from Decatur County, still holds his $6,000-a-year post with the state. That is as clear-cut a violation as there could be.

Let the governor either enforce his order in his own household or admit his hypocrisy.

Others Should Follow Waynesboro's Example

The parents who permit their child to operate an automobile without a valid driver's license act in total disregard of the state law and the welfare of others.

In Waynesboro, Police Chief W. W. McTeer has decided to discourage such occurrences. He has published an official notice that all teen-agers who drive in Waynesboro will be stopped and asked for their driver's license.

This is a practice that should be extended, insofar as possible, to every community in Georgia. Respect for law and order begins in the home.

Parents must be taught to cease and desist from allowing under-age drivers to sling two tons of metal around in utter defiance of the law.

Police and state troopers have enough to do trying to nab the wantonly reckless, the drunken and the criminals on the highways without having to put up with mama's boy out for an illegal rock 'n' roll race on two wheels.

Hungarian Massacre Mocks Sobolev's Words

Soviet Ambassador Arkady A. Sobolev's touching concern for the people of Lebanon as expressed in a U.S. speech Tuesday hit a new high in hypocrisy even for a country which has adopted it as standard.

U.S. response to a request from Lebanon's government for help in maintaining that country's independence against a revolution inspired and maintained from Syria through Soviet support is termed an "act of aggression." Sobolev further characterized it as "contrary to the usages and principles of international law and a challenge to the entire freedom-loving mankind."

He said further that the people of Lebanon had rebelled against their government of their own accord and had a right to run their own affairs.

Poppycock! The world knows that in both Iraq and Lebanon these revolutions were fomented and directed through Egypt's Nasser with Soviet backing and arms.

Let it be lost in the maze of events now going on, let us remind Mr. Sobolev of the spontaneous revolution of a real "freedom-loving people" in Hungary a few months ago against the Communist yoke. Thousands died before Soviet guns—men, women and children armed with little more than courage were slaughtered like cattle. They are still dying as the Russian terrorists conduct mock trials and brand patriots as traitors.

Let it be pointed out, too, that the Russians brooked no interference from the United Nations in Hungary. This spontaneous revolt against police rule and slavery was put down in one of the most shameful episodes in human history.

Nations of the Middle East should look to Hungary as an example of the fate of those who fall for the Soviet bait.

Time To Teach Child Is When Mind Is Open

Georgia educators, along with others in the nation and in some ways ahead of them, have decided the time to begin science teaching is in the first grade.

In Carroll County, the Oak Mountain science laboratory has been set up to add research to the primary R's in the elementary curriculum. Workshops at Emory, at the University of Georgia and elsewhere have been arranged to teach teachers how to present science and math at the level where grade school youngsters can best be motivated and taught.

What is true in science is true as well in language.

The curriculum builders are beginning to see that the foreign language can be taught in the grades.

The young mind is open, it yearns to learn.

It is far better to lead that mind into the wonders of science or the romance of French than to drill it constantly on the fact that the subject of a gerund is in the possessive case.

The right time to teach science is when the young mind first asks, "Why?" or "How?"

Obsolete Courthouses Soak the Taxpayers!

Last week a new Ware County courthouse and jail were dedicated. The imposing marble structure is modern with a law library and offices for judges equipped with fireproof vaults for record-keeping.

These courthouse dedications are signs of the changing times in the state. One by one Georgia counties are realizing justice can be served best in quarters less cramped.

This desire to improve governmental structures is quite laudable. Even more commendable, however, would be a move within the state to consolidate some of the obsolete courthouses and convert them into more efficient units better equipped to serve the taxpayers.

Taxpayers at the bonodocks and branchheads as well as in the cities are getting tired of being "politicked" out of their hard-earned dollars by parasitic politicians who fight tooth and nail to preserve the present cumbersome, inefficient network of 159 sprawling county courthouses.

Oklahoman Blasts Groveling Diplomacy Of United States in Dealing With Reds

Muskogee, Okla.—Some people still pretend to be surprised at communist perfidy, but if the Communists have ever abided by a treaty or any other agreement it has not been recorded.

Of course, one can hardly expect atheists to have any moral scruples against lying, stealing or any other outlawry. Counterfeiting and air piracy have become commonplace with them. They have defiantly held many of our allies in slave labor and they are now holding nine of our airmen as hostages for a ransom. The price is the recognition of East Germany as a free and independent country, even though we all know that it is neither free nor independent.

It is rather difficult to understand why we should continue negotiating other treaties or agreements with such people while they hold these nine men as hostages.

Are we losing our self-respect and our patriotism? Is such groveling called diplomacy?

She Asks for Statue Of Late Poet Reece

Atlanta—Please add another letter to the praise of our late beloved poet and writer—Herbert Byron Reece of Blairsville.

While visiting in a friend's home I was looking over the daily newspapers and read his first published poem. At once I felt that here was real talent. Later I had the happy experience of meeting this writer at an autograph gathering at the Baptist Book Store.

I suggest that all his books be put on sale and the proceeds used in financing a statue to be placed where he was laid to rest.

Country Is Drifting Without Any Ideals?

Baxley—Isn't it true?

We are drifting without ideals, without hope, trusting in military might for something we call security. We tax ourselves for arms. We are unable to do for peace what we will do for war. Half of the population of the world is underclothed and underfed.

It will continue every day. Perhaps with road messes, irregularities and Goldfine investigations, etc.

W. CLYDE ELMORE.

He Urges Imposition Of City Sales Tax

Atlanta—It has been well said that "The power to tax is the power to destroy." We today are witnessing onslaughts against that hapless target of all new taxation, the "property owner," who, having no organized political voice, is powerless to defend himself against the political chameleon who dares not put the taxes on those who use the taxes for fear of his own selfish hide.

If a new tax is needed for schools, no politician has the moral fortitude to come forward and advocate a direct sales tax whereby all pay a small amount in proportion to what he spends. Instead, it is all loaded onto a few who already are staggering.

The patently fiat objection raised to a recently discussed city sales tax was that such a tax would drive trade into surrounding areas. This objection (assuming it to be valid) could easily be overcome by a four-county-wide uniform sales tax which would provide needed revenue for schools and services in areas surrounding Atlanta.

This country was not built by people who said, "I want this and I want that, but let's make that man over there pay my share."

It was built instead by people who took their part in what had to be done, with no question but that it was the only just way. The time has come for a return to these principles of justice.

Mill Whistle Is Silenced

From now on, the mill whistle at Jefferson Mills in Jefferson, Jackson County, will be only the name of the company weekly and a sound from the past.

In "The Mill Whistle" for the June 27, 1958, Morris and Tom Bryan of the mill ownership said jointly, "We hope you listened long and loud this morning to the lusty toot of the old mill whistle. Its familiar blast will be missing from now on. . . . And gone, too, will be the mournful cry of the neighborhood dogs that evidently looked on the whistle as a grating nuisance to sensitive ears."

The Bryan brothers went on to say the whistle had served no practical purpose in recent years. Instead, it had been simply adding to factory overhead, particularly on Monday when a man had to go to work early to fire the boiler to get up enough steam to blow the whistle at 4:30 a.m.

There was a time, as one employee pointed out, when 90 to 95 per cent of all the folks who worked at the mill lived within whistle distance. Now two-thirds of them are out of sound.

The mill whistle goes the way of the railroad water tank and the coal chute.

As someone said a long, long time ago, "The steam that blows the whistle never turns the wheels."

Then there is that famous whistle story attributed to A. Lincoln about the steamboat that had a three-foot boiler and a seven-foot whistle and every time the whistle blew, the boat stopped.

I LIKE THIS: "Wouldn't it be wonderful if men always displayed as much patience as they do when waiting for a fish to bite."

JEST FOR TODAY: Foreman: "We find the defendant not guilty."

Judge: "What possible reason can this jury have for such an astonishing verdict?"

Foreman: "Insanity, Your Honor."

Judge: "What, all 12 of you?"

Imagination Lights Torch of Progress

The word imagination is often used in a derogatory way, as though it is inferior to actual experience. We shrug our shoulders and say that a man has too vivid an imagination and that the ideas formed in our minds are unreal and unlike anything we see in life.

For those who are dissatisfied with life as it is, imagination may become an escape to a world of fantasy or a blueprint for the kind of world men must follow if their life is to become better. I want to say a few things about the cultivation of imaginations which form ideas and conceptions which will make the world a better place.

No good or worthy idea which has benefited mankind was not first a dream, perhaps a wild and unbelievable dream, in the mind of men. The imaginative thinker dreams great and bold dreams and then offers his ideas for the betterment of men. Many barriers are raised against the advent of new ideas. No doubt many ideas which would long ago have brought peace and joy to us were snuffed out by cynical and thoughtless persons before they had a chance. We ridicule the thinker of new ideas.

Jesus Christ was one of the most imaginative persons who ever walked the paths of this world. The realm of His mind was measureless. His dreams were wonderfully inspiring. His thoughts embraced eternal truths. Men mocked Him as being impractical and a visionary. But those thoughts and dreams have long since become a pattern by which wise men have attempted to fashion their lives. Impractical? History shows us that His way is the only one by which "practical" men can bring understanding, unity and peace—the things we must have if we are to survive.

The imagination invigorates reality with new truths and fresh ideas. Our world would soon grow dull and tiresome if there were not a continual flow of new concepts and new solutions to old problems. We need, first of all, a guarantee that there will always be an abundance of new ideas. And, secondly, we need a willingness to try new ideas. In this way we shall not become stalemated in the mistakes and errors we have made time and again.

Of course, the imagination is essential for the development of a religious sense in our lives. Imagination gives reality to the unseen and eyes for invisibles. A quickening of our mental life quickens our response to God. No man has ever "seen" God, yet through a vigorous life of the mind men have known God, His will and His requirements for our lives. To many men God is more real than anything else in their lives.

Gen. de Gaulle Has His Work Cut Out

WASHINGTON—Premier de Gaulle's greatest test is still ahead of him. And it's a tough one. His goal: To find a way to end the hopeless, helpless succession of Paris governments; to bring stability to French democracy. To do this he wants to cross the French parliamentary system, with its all-powerful National Assembly, with an independent executive comparable to the presidency in the United States.

He can succeed in bringing the French Army under civil authority. He can succeed in bringing peace to Algeria. But these achievements, if they come, will only have dealt with the symptoms, not the cause, of France's illness.

In another six weeks Gen. de Gaulle must come up with his constitutional reforms and then win the approval of the French people for them in a national referendum.

What he wants to bring about is a government of divided powers—somewhat comparable to the United States—but with a cabinet subject to the approval of Parliament.

This is an unusual combination of parliamentary-presidential government and I can think of only one modern precedent for what Gen. de Gaulle is seeking. This is the constitution of Finland which came into force in 1919 and which drew on both the American and French political systems. Here is the way it operates:

The Finnish president is elected, not by Parliament, but by an electoral college which exercises real power of decision. In many ways the Finnish electoral college in picking a president resembles the American party convention when it is picking a presidential nominee.

The term of the president is six years. The Parliament term is four years.

The president is vested with supreme executive power while legislative power is exercised by a single-chamber Parliament.

Here is the point at which the Finnish constitution marries the

1. Separation of powers somewhat as in the United States.

2. A strong president who is not subordinate to Parliament.

3. A cabinet which must be approved by Parliament but which cannot be overthrown unless Parliament can agree upon its successor.

France has suffered through 25 governments in the past 10 years. The kind of world we are living in today does not permit the luxury of such political impotence. This is why Gen. de Gaulle's constitutional reforms are his greatest challenge.

This Father Misses His Miss Pittypat

Dear Miss Pittypat: Your father came over to my house the other night to help me cook a steak in the back yard. He looked fine. His hair was all slicked back and he had on a loud-checked sport shirt that draped very nicely over his bay window and at first glance I thought I'd never seen him looking better.

Pretty soon, though, I discovered there was something very much wrong with him.

I think maybe he was the loneliest man I ever saw. He said you and your mama had gone on a little trip for two weeks and he was staying home looking after the house and your dog Brownie. He said Brownie was already beginning to miss you even though you hadn't been gone but two days.

But I think he was the one that was really missing you. He kept talking about you all evening. We'd be talking along—you know, grown folks' talk—and he'd get a faraway look in his eyes like he wasn't listening. Then he'd talk about you.

He said there was nothing in the world like being the father of a 4-year-old daughter. He said sons were fine. He liked sons. But daughters were something special. He said you were particularly special. He said you had the cutest figure of any lady he ever saw. He said you had a figure just like a little butterball.

He said you were smart, too. He said he didn't have to read you to sleep at night. You read him to sleep. He said you'd take a book your mama had read to you when you were young, maybe 3 years old, and sit in his lap and read him the story word for word, right out of your memory, just as if you were reading every word.

He said he bet you were the smartest little girl in the world. He said he did not know how he was going to sleep for two whole weeks with you not there to read to him.

I think he likes your mama, too, for he had some nice things to say about her. But it's you he misses. And I think maybe you had better write him a letter or maybe call him up on the telephone some night and read him a long, long story so he can go to sleep. Be sure and call collect.

Text of Russian Statement Condemning U.S. Intervention as War Threat

NEW YORK (AP)—Here is an official translation distributed by the Soviet news agency Tass of Wednesday's Soviet government statement on the Middle East.

On July 15 the whole world learned with indignation of armed intervention by the United States of America in Lebanon. Ships of the 6th U. S. Fleet entered the port of Beirut and landed marines on the territory of Lebanon.

"GROSS INTERVENTION"

On the same day the White House published—in the name of the President of the U.S.A.—a statement attempting somehow to justify this gross military intervention in Lebanon's internal affairs. The statement contends that the United States of America sent its troops to Lebanon allegedly to demonstrate United States concern for Lebanon's integrity and independence which allegedly are being threatened from outside, and also to protect American citizens in that country.

The utter insolvency of this contention is self-evident for no one menaces Lebanon's integrity and independence. Abundant evidence of this is provided, for example, by the statement of the U.N. Secretary General Hammarskjöld and by the report of U.N. observers on the situation in Lebanon.

As for "concern" for the safety of American citizens, one may be permitted to ask what standards of international law allow foreign powers to send their armed forces to the territory of other states for such purposes. There are no such standards in international law. It is common knowledge, however, that references to the need to protect one's citizens have since time immemorial been a favorite device of all colonialists to justify gangster-like attacks on small countries.

"REAL REASON"

The real reason for armed U.S. intervention in Lebanon is the desire of the oil monopolies of the United States and other western powers to retain their colonial hold on the middle east countries, and also the obvious bankruptcy of their policy in the Arab East, the collapse of the Baghdad Pact and of the notorious Dulles-Eisenhower doctrine.

This is strikingly evidenced by the latest events in Iraq which the White House statement regards as a reason which accelerated armed intervention by the United States. However, the events in Iraq are new proof of the Arab peoples' unflinching determination to rid themselves of colonial dependence and to take their destiny into their own hands.

It is known that on the night of July 13 to 14, monarchy was overthrown in Iraq by the army, supported by the people, a republic was proclaimed and government of the Republic of Iraq set up.

FIRST ACTS

The first foreign policy acts of this government, led by Gen. Abdel Kerim Kassam, were statements on full support for the principles of the Bandung Conference, withdrawal from the aggressive military Baghdad Pact, and recognition of the United Arab Republic.

The government of the Republic of Iraq declared that it would "act in line with U.N. principles," "follow an Arab policy and strictly abide by the decisions of the Bandung conference" and that it was prepared "to honor commitments and treaties springing from the interests of the motherland."

It also announced that it guaranteed the security of foreign nationals and their property.

These acts testify to the government's intention to defend the country's national independence and to fight with the other freedom loving Arab peoples to overcome the heavy aftermath of colonialism, to develop the national economy and raise the living standards of the people.

"DOMESTIC MATTER"

It is natural that the policy statements of the government of the Republic of Iraq, conforming as they do to the strivings of the Iraqi and all other Arab peoples, should meet with unanimous support both in Arab countries and in all peace-loving countries which regard the establishment of a republic as a wholly domestic matter of the people of Iraq.

This turn in the events in the Middle East obviously does not suit the colonial powers which received the news of the establishment of the Republic of Iraq with undisguised hostility. Feverish activity began immediately in Washington, London and Ankara.

The existence of plans for large scale intervention by the colonial powers in the internal affairs of Arab East countries is also borne out by the statement by the British Foreign Minister Lloyd that the British government was informed in advance of the American government's intention to land its troops in the Lebanon, that the British government fully supports this action of the U.S.A. and that the British armed forces in the area are being kept ready.

To provide a pretext for armed intervention in the internal affairs of the Arab countries, a statement by Lebanese President Chamoun asking the governments of the United States and Britain and France to send troops to Lebanon was inspired. It is well known, however, that the present events in Lebanon are a result of purely internal causes and that only interference by Baghdad Pact countries and the United States, seeking to preserve an anti-national regime at any cost, has led to a civil war and to an aggravation of the entire situation in the area.

"NO BONES"

It should be noted that the landing of American troops in Beirut is an act of armed intervention not only against Lebanon but against all the freedom-loving Arab countries as well. No bones are made about it in, for instance, the aforementioned White House statement which—certainly by no accident—links the dispatch of troops to Lebanon directly to the events in Iraq. This is also borne out by the fact that King Hussein of Jordan, obviously on advice from his patrons, has proclaimed himself the head of the now non-existent Iraqi-Jordanian federation in place of King Faisal, despite the fact that he had neither substantive nor formal grounds for it.

The provocative nature of this step is self-evident, and it is being ignored that the government of the Republic of Iraq, supported by the whole of the people, has officially announced Iraq's withdrawal from the Iraqi-Jordanian federation.

Armed intervention by the United States in the Lebanon shows clearly that the imperialists have cast off the disguise and have started an open aggression against peace-loving Arab peoples. It becomes especially clear in this connection why the government of the U.S.A. did not accept the Soviet government's proposal of February 11, 1957, concerning noninterference by the great powers in the internal affairs of the countries of the area. The government of the United States refused to undertake commitments which would have ensured peace and relaxed the tension in that part of the world.

"GRAVE THREAT"

It wanted to keep its hands free for aggression in the area. U.S. armed intervention in Lebanon creates a grave threat to peace and is fraught with far-reaching consequences. The peoples cannot remain unconcerned in face of this brazen imperialist aggression, a gross encroachment on the sovereignty and national independence of the Arab countries and "unceremonious violation of the United Nations principles."

The White House plea that American troops are being sent to Lebanon for purposes of self-defense and in the national interests of the United States is open mockery of these principles. Who does not know that the United States lies thousands of kilometers from Lebanon and that the people of Lebanon and other Arab countries can in no way threaten either the national interests or the security of the U.S.A. as for Lebanon, it is precisely armed American intervention that is the main threat to the security of this small Arab country.

"FAIT ACCOMPLI"

Having taken to the road of flagrant violation of the U.N. charter, the government of the United States is now attempting to confront the Security Council and the whole of the U.N. with a fait accompli and to pressure the U.N. into approving its unilateral aggressive actions.

The Soviet government holds

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION, Thursday, July 17, 1958 3

that the situation in the Middle East, created by open aggression on the part of the U.S.A. supported by the other colonial powers, is alarming and dangerous to world peace.

Under these circumstances, the Security Council and the U.N. General Assembly should take urgent and vigorous measures to curb aggression and to protect the national independence of Arab states which have fallen victim to an unprovoked attack.

The Soviet government urges the government of the United States to discontinue its armed intervention in the internal affairs of Arab countries and to withdraw its troops from the Lebanon immediately.

The Soviet government declares that the Soviet Union cannot remain indifferent to events creating a grave menace in an area abutting on its frontiers, and reserves the right to take the necessary measures dictated by the interests of peace and security.

Gov. Long Signs Blood Label Bill

BATON ROUGE, (AP)—Gov. Earl Long, cleaning up the last bills produced by Louisiana's 1958 Legislature, Wednesday signed a new segregation law requiring blood plasma be labeled according to race.

The bill, segregation leaders told a legislative committee, was designed to force the American Red Cross to label blood supplies shipped into this state.

William F. Shaw, counsel for the Rainach Segregation Committee, charged the Red Cross did so before 1951 but discontinued the policy because of pressure from the National Association for Advancement of Colored People.

U.S. Bares Nasser Aid To Rebels

Arms and Troops Sent to Lebanon

By RUSSELL BAKER
(Copyright 1958, The New York Times Co.)
WASHINGTON — The State department gave Congress Wednesday U.S. intelligence reports showing military intervention by President Nasser's United Arab Republic in the Lebanon rebellion from May 11 to June 21.

The reports were submitted to separate closed sessions of the House Foreign Affairs and the Senate Foreign Relations Committees by Christian Herter, Under Secretary of State.

The intelligence file contrasted with the findings of Dag Hammarskjöld, Sec. Gen. of the U.N., who reported earlier this month that the rebellion was basically an internal affair.

ENTIRE CONDUCT

The two committees' questioning of Herter was not limited to a discussion of whether Lebanon had been a victim of what the State department called "indirect aggression." It ranged, at times with embarrassing candor, over the Administration's entire conduct of Middle East policy.

Press and public were excluded, but some hint of what went on came from members leaving the committee room. "It was a very frank, open discussion," Sen. Mansfield (D-Mont.), said. "Herter acquitted himself very well under the circumstances. There was no pulling of punches."

Sen. Kennedy, (D-Mass.) said there seemed to have been "a general feeling that it was an unwise move to send troops into Lebanon." But, he said, since the President had moved, most members felt compelled to accept and make the most of his decision.

ATTEMPT TO JUSTIFY

Most senators agreed that Herter had told them nothing they did not already know about developments of the last 48 hours. The meeting, they said, was largely a review and an attempt to justify the Administration's decision to the Congress.

Herter's reports on outside intervention in Lebanon came from a variety of sources and included no evaluation of their reliability. The first entry, for May 11, was a report from "reliable sources" that they had "positive proof" that Syrian intelligence agents had instigated and taken a "prominent lead" in the first rioting in Tripoli.

100 COMMANDOS

The next day's report was of heavy infiltration by guerrilla fighters from Syria. On May 13 a ship sailing from Gaza was stopped off Dammur. It carried 6,000 rifles and 50,000 Egyptian pounds ($144,000), the report stated. That same afternoon several small ships reportedly landed about 100 Egyptian and Palestinian commandos on Lebanon's southern coast.

The reports also said that 2,000 Syrian pounds ($500,000) had been delivered to the "Lebanese opposition" at the order of Col. Abdel Hamid Serraj, then Syria's Minister of the Interior. "Top leadership and direction of current strikes and demonstrations coming from Syrian Deuxieme Bureau (intelligence)," a May 13 report asserted.

SAME PERIOD

In the same period 2,000 Syrian army commandos were reported "operating into Lebanon" from various border points.

A May 28 report said a truck carrying arms from Syria had been intercepted in Lebanon with 88 submachine guns, 63 rifles and cases of high explosives, hand grenades and ammunitions.

Additional reports listed numbers of Syrians, Egyptians and Palestinians involved from time to time in action in Lebanon and referred to activities by various Syrian government figures in support of the infiltration.

Graham Warns 'Last Drama'

May Be Shaping

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Billy Graham thinks the world now is witnessing "the shuffling on stage for the last great drama of history."

"History began in the Middle East," the evangelist told a news conference.

He termed the Middle Eastern situation very dangerous, adding: "I don't think the American people are yet aware of the dire consequences to which the situation could lead."

Is mankind close to the final cataclysmic battle predicted by the prophets of history?

"That may come within 24 hours," he said, "or it may not come for 1,000 years."

GENEVA — The Western and Communist scientific delegations failed once again Wednesday to resolve their differences over the radiological method for the detection of atomic explosions.

A communique issued after Wednesday's meeting said the proposed summary conclusions on the detection of nuclear explosions through the collection of radioactive debris "remained under study by the conference."

The principal point of difference is that the Western scientific delegation believes airplanes should be used in any monitoring system to collect radioactive fallout, while the Communists maintain that it would be sufficient to collect the radioactive debris with ground sampling stations.

The scientists Wednesday continued their discussion of the method of detecting nuclear explosions by registering earth shock waves. Papers on the seismic detection method were presented by Prof. Edward Bullard, a geophysicist at Cambridge University, and by Dr. Mikhail A. Sadovski, a corresponding member of the Soviet Academy of Sciences.

The 2½-hour meeting was under the chairmanship of Dr. James B. Fisk, head of the Western delegation. The next meeting will be held Thursday.

TB Official Held in Lewd Photos Case

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — An official of the County Tuberculosis and Health Assn. was accused Wednesday of secretly photographing socially prominent matrons while they undressed for checkups.

Officers said the photographs were taken through a one-way mirror by Hank Harader, executive secretary of the association. Boxes of photographs of women nude to the waist were found in the association's building.

Officers said Harader, 43, married and the father of three, took the photographs over a nine-month period. He was booked on suspicion of sex perversion.

An 18-year-old secretary reported to police that Harader tried to take nude pictures of her. Officers said they then found the boxes of pictures.

Officers said while the women were undressing for the X-rays, Harader would stand behind a one-way mirror and take their picture.

Harader had been executive secretary for the association the past nine years.

Father, 19, Is Captured In Woods, Admits Rifle-Slaying of 3 Daughters

TOWANDA, Pa. (AP) — Two members of a posse followed a horse's trail Wednesday until they found and captured a young father who state police later said confessed shooting to death his three young daughters.

Paul Pelton, 19, of nearby Troy, was captured by a state policeman and a farmhand as he lay resting in a wooded area four miles from his farm home. He was armed with three rifles, a hatchet, and a knife but offered no resistance.

State Police Cpl. Joseph Teldan said Pelton signed a statement in which he told of putting the children to bed, then watching a TV mystery show. After a while, the statement continued, Pelton considered for 20 minutes whether to shoot the children.

He got up, loaded a rifle, and fired once at each of the tots.

He then got on a horse and headed for a mountainous area where he had decided to hide out. Teldan said Pelton gave no clue as to his motivation, saying: "I don't know why."

Pelton was described by his wife as a devoted husband and father. Teldan described him as a man of good reputation.

Justice of the Peace James Burnett ordered Pelton held without bail for the August grand jury. The bodies of the children were found by Pelton's wife, Margaret, 23, when she returned from the Troy Community Hospital after visiting their other child, Paul, 5 months old and critically ill from asthma.

Dead was the child's twin sister, Pauline, 2, and Patricia, 3. Allen Palmer, a farmhand who worked with Pelton, noticed a horse missing from a barn. He and state police Sgt. Herbert Pecht joined the posse and followed the animal's tracks up a dirt road and through a patch of woods until they found Pelton lying on the ground. As Pelton stood up to light a cigarette, Pecht fired over his head and called on Pelton to surrender.

Among the weapons Pelton had with him, said Pecht, was a .22-caliber rifle, reported by investigators to be the type used to shoot the three little girls.

Mrs. Pelton said that when she returned home she found Connie slumped in her stroller, apparently asleep. She said she called out to her husband and after getting no answer suddenly realized the child was dead. She had been shot in the stomach.

Mrs. Pelton ran into a bedroom and found Patricia's body on a bed. That of Pauline was in a basket. Both had been shot in the head.

No Draft Increase Pentagon Expects

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Defense Department has no plans under consideration "at this time" for increasing draft calls, it was announced Wednesday.

The department said in a statement that previously announced draft calls for 10,000 men a month through August are expected to remain in effect.

"It is anticipated that calls of this order of magnitude will continue for the balance of this year," it added.

Air Base Hires Accused Teacher

HAMILTON AIR FORCE BASE, CALIF. (AP) — A teacher, fired for refusing to answer questions about Communist affiliations before 1949, will teach children of this Air Force base's personnel.

Phillip W. Schneider, superintendent of the San Jose School District, disclosed Wednesday the hiring of Edward L. Hanchett, 45, had been approved by the district's trustees. "We're convinced that Mr. Hanchett has never advocated overthrow of the United States government," Schneider said in a statement.

"Furthermore, he is a very competent teacher and stood head and shoulders above all other applicants for the job."

Young, Old Troop In For $1 Salk Shots Here

By JAMES SHEPPARD

Two bareback boys in short pants grinned smugly, watching a doctor inject poliomyelitis vaccine into their mother's arm.

"I'm glad so many people have this opportunity to get these shots," said the boys' mother, Mrs. Alma Stacks of 1776 Main St., NW.

Her oldest son, Ralph, 9, remained at home, suffering with a right arm paralyzed by polio, while Daryl, 6, and Collis, 5, accompanied their mother to the Fulton Academy of Medicine Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Stacks was among 2,944 persons—mostly adults—who were vaccinated quickly against the crippling disease.

Like most youngsters, Daryl and Collis had already been vaccinated with the Salk antipolio virus. They got their shots during the mass vaccination program for youngsters shortly after the vaccine had been tested.

But, like most adults, Mrs. Stacks had never taken the time to get immunized.

"I wish Virgil, my husband, weren't out of town so he could get his shot," she said. "Maybe he won't have to drive that truck two weeks from now and can get shot then."

The Fulton County Medical Society and the Fulton-DeKalb Chapter, National Polio Foundation, will hold the next community-wide clinic on July 30. The shots will continue to be offered at a "bargain basement" price—the wholesale cost of the vaccine, $1, or free for those without the dollar.

Edgar J. Forio, polio chapter chairman, and Dr. Harold McDonald, medical society president, estimated that 60 per cent of Atlanta area residents under the age of 40 have not been immunized against polio.

They cited figures indicating how the vaccine is conquering polio in Fulton County: 67 cases in 1956, 38 in 1957, two paralytic cases so far this year compared to 18 paralytic cases last year.

Twenty-seven doctors from the medical society closed their offices early to give the shots. Seventeen volunteers from the polio chapter took care of registration.

Mrs. Henry C. Davis Jr. of 1796 White Oak Hollow, NE, got her shot in less than two minutes, then proceeded on to the airport to meet her husband.

One business executive rushed into the clinic with his shirt-sleeves rolled up. "My wife came home telling me how quick it was to get shot down here," he said. "I've never had the time to spare to get my polio shot."

During the first hour, a peak period when 1,211 persons were vaccinated, they entered the clinic, registered, paid for and received their shots in less than five minutes each.

At the end of the three-hour clinic, the doctors' hands were not as tired of pushing and pulling needles as was hoped. Enough vaccine to immunize 10,000 persons had been made available, but only 2,944 persons came by.

GEORGIA NEWS ROUNDUP

Low Prices, Rain Add Up To Tough Time on Farms

Georgia truck crops are in ample supply, making it a good time for housewives to fill their freezers and pantry shelves. But the abundance, plus excessive rains, means farmers are receiving very low prices for their crops.

Heavy rainfall during the past six weeks did considerable damage to vegetable crops in south Georgia, the Georgia Crop Reporting Service noted.

The harvesting has passed the peak there on practically all vegetable crops, except cantaloupes, tomatoes and watermelons. These crops are moving in volume with very low price received.

Harvesting of summer vegetables in the state's mountain areas is running later than usual due to late plantings caused by the spring's unfavorable weather conditions.

DeKalb Votes $7.5 Million School Fund

The DeKalb County Board of Education has adopted a budget of $7,518,929 for the 1959 fiscal year.

The increase is $1,166,799 over the 1958 budget.

Officials said the increase was necessary in part to support three new high schools and 13 new elementary schools opening in September.

The new schools expected to relieve some of the county's bulging classrooms, will complete a building program approved in 1956.

The budget increase will provide salaries for 16 new principals, 113 additional teachers, and other personnel for clerical and custodial services, plus funds for heating, lighting, and maintaining the new buildings.

The new budget includes an increase of $100 to $200 in teachers' salaries under the State salary increase program.

County school officials predict that pupil enrollment for the upcoming year will hit the 40,000 mark. During the 1957-58 school term 36,876 pupils were enrolled.

Woman Injured In Battle Royal With 3 Others

A battle royal in a Whitehall street, SW, restaurant Wednesday resulted in hospitalization for one and jail for two others. Police were searching for the fourth.

Lt. G. H. Christian and Detective W. S. Acree said the battlers were women. A male bystander who attempted to break it up admitted that he had undertaken a peacemaker's role.

Mary Atkinson, 44, of a Pulliam street, SW, was admitted to the Grady Hospital emergency clinic with severe bruises, officers said. They said she apparently had been "beaten, stomped and her head banged on the floor."

Mrs. Atkinson and two others, May Cates, 19, of a Capitol avenue address, and Mae Taylor, 41, of Pryor street, SW, were held for suspicion of assault and battery, officers said. They added the fourth battler had not been found.

None of the participants would say what the fight was about, officers said.

Films' Talmadge Left $3 Million And Real Estate

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—Silent film star Norma Talmadge left an estate valued at $3,060,321.41, exclusive of real estate in California and Florida.

A final inventory of the estate was filed in District Court Wednesday.

The inventory showed Miss Talmadge left $816,347 in cash in banks, with the remainder of the estate composed chiefly of securities and Nevada real estate.

The late star died Dec. 24, 1957, in Las Vegas, where she made her home.

After specific bequests, including $200,000 and her home here to her husband, her will divided her estate in approximately equal shares between her two sisters.

Today it's 1965 at PHILCO Dealers!

Philco scientists develop a radically new Semi-Flat picture tube and Predicta chassis—open a new era in TV design, function and performance!

In one bold stroke of scientific research Philco has brought new freedom to TV design. They've developed a new S-F picture tube (which measures less from front to back than any you've ever seen) and a compact Predicta chassis that packs more power into less space.

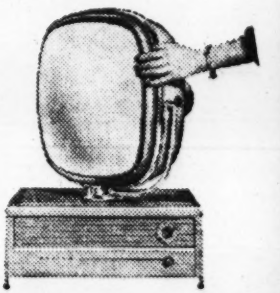

Philco opens the door to entirely new TV concepts. Suddenly there are no restrictions on the placement of picture tube and chassis. The picture can be "floated" above its table-top cabinet. Whole new approaches can be taken to cabinet design. New uses, bold new standards of performance.

World's First SWIVEL SCREEN Table TV!

At the touch of a finger Philco's amazing new Predicta picture tube swivels—beams its picture right where you want it. Enjoy television that seems to float on air! Mahogany finish.

Atlanta Gains 77,000 Homes in 6 Years

The four-county Atlanta metropolitan area had a net gain of 77,000 dwelling units during the six-year period prior to 1957, the Commerce Department reported here Wednesday.

11 Million Jews Live In 115 Countries

GENEVA (UPI) —The world's 11,827,000 Jews are scattered through 115 countries, and in 72 of them they find no overt anti-Semitism, the World Jewish Congress reported Tuesday.

The increase brought to 275,000 the number of dwelling units in the area of the end of 1956 —an average of one unit for every three persons among the 850,800 persons then making up the population.

Ten thousand of Atlanta's living units were cited as being in "dilapidated" condition. The figures cited are from a new Census Bureau report entitled "Components of Change, 1950 to 1956, Atlanta Standard Metropolitan Area, 1956 National Housing Inventory." The report is available at the Commerce Department's Atlanta Field Office.

Heart Victim Gary, 11, Plans Big Year

Decatur's Gary Lancaster is mapping his plans now for a big, busy year.

The 11-year-old youngster, born with a hole between the two lower chambers of his heart, is going to have an operation to remedy the situation later this month.

Gary, waiting eagerly for the heart repair, says, "I get tired so quick I can't keep up with my friends. But after my operation things are going to be different."

He's planning on playing a lot of Little League baseball next year.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Lancaster of 1883 Camelia Dr., have already purchased the lad's baseball gear.

Heart Victim Gary, 11, Plans Big Year

Decatur's Gary Lancaster is mapping his plans now for a big, busy year.

The 11-year-old youngster, born with a hole between the two lower chambers of his heart, is going to have an operation to remedy the situation later this month.

Gary, waiting eagerly for the heart repair, says, "I get tired so quick I can't keep up with my friends. But after my operation things are going to be different."

He's planning on playing a lot of Little League baseball next year.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Lancaster of 1883 Camelia Dr., have already purchased the lad's baseball gear.

Gary and his mother will leave via plane for the University of Minnesota hospital in Minneapolis Thursday. The operation will be performed approximately two weeks later.

The trip will be the first one by air for both the mother and son.

Gary's operation is being sponsored by the Crippled Children's Division of the State Health Department. Blood needed for the delicate operation will be provided by the United Auto Workers, AFL-CIO, of Minneapolis.

Because of the hole, Gary's heart must work overtime in its pumping operations. The least exertion makes the heart work even harder.

With the abnormal hole closed, Gary will be able to live a normal life.

Billy Graham Converts Find Great Joy in Lord

QUESTION: I was reared in a Christian home where the Bible was clearly taught and believed. Since I have grown up I have seen older people converted and how they rejoiced. I have never had this kind of feeling. Is it because I have been taught about Jesus and "good" all my life?

ANSWER: There are perhaps two reasons why you have never experienced this joy you have observed.

First, if you accepted Christ in early life, the transition from innocent childhood to a believing Christian was not nearly so noticeable as in a mature person whose conscience has been weighed down with years of accumulated guilt. To illustrate: Let us say a farmer and his son were walking home from the cornfield. The boy carries a few ears in his hands but the father bends beneath the weight of a 100-pound sack of corn. Now, suppose a friend comes down that road with a wagon and offers to carry father and son home. He carries the load of each, but it is obvious the father would be the most relieved and grateful. The child coming to Christ, because his burden of sin is light, may not experience the overwhelming joy of the confirmed sinner who finds relief from his guilt through Christ. His load was greater—thus his joy is greater.

The other reason could well be that you have trusted in your good upbringing rather than in the person of Christ. Only you can decide which applies to your case.

U.S. Spurns Reds, Refuses Pullout

said many times, and the resolution which we have introduced and which is now pending offers us a constructive way for us to do so."

RISE IN OPPOSITION

But quick U.N. action on the U.S. proposal was running into increasing opposition.

Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld appeared cool to the whole idea, and some neutral nations were taking a similar view. There appeared to be no desire to take the issue speedily before a special General Assembly of 81 nations. This would have to be done in order to bypass the Soviet veto in the Council.

Ambassador Omar Loutfi of the U.A.R. read a statement to the Council by Adel Aseer, president of the Lebanese Chamber of Deputies, protesting the presence of U.S. Marines.

HAD FORWARDED

Loutfi declared Cairo had forwarded him the statement, which said the protest was addressed to the Security Council and the United States. U.N. officials said it had not yet been received here.

Hammarskjöld made a brief statement to the Council expressing hope the U.N. observation group would retain its key position. He announced the group had been successful in arranging with Lebanese rebels for inspection of the entire border area.

"It is my feeling that with the result thus achieved, the observation group is fully equipped to play the part envisaged for it in the total U.N. effort, with its general purpose of ensuring against infiltration and smuggling of arms," he declared.

REFUSED CONTACT

A communication received here from the observer group said it had refused to establish contact with the U.S. Marines, on the grounds it had no authority for a working relationship with non-Lebanese forces.

The second day of Council debate on the Middle East crisis was marked by sharp clashes between Lodge and Sobolev.

Sobolev accused the United States of "the big lie, the big mockery, the big cheat," in claiming that Lebanon was imperiled by emergence of a new pro-Nasser regime in Iraq.

Lodge replied that Sobolev "creates the impression Arab nationalism and subversion of independence are all one thing. They are two different things. We are in favor of nationalism and we are against the subversion of the independence of small countries."

Ike Sends Murphy To Beirut

"spectator" while the United States intervened in the Middle East. Highly placed U.S. officials did not expect the Soviet Union to go to war to stop the United States.

Murphy, who has behind him a long career of delicate political missions, was called out of a Senate committee hearing on passports by Secretary of State Dulles and told to get to Beirut by the "fastest possible means."

After a White House meeting with the President, Dulles, Secretary of Defense McElroy and Gen. Nathan F. Twining, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Murphy left by Air Force transport for Westover, Mass., where he boarded a Jet KC-135 tanker, which holds the transatlantic speed record.

As he left Washington Murphy noted that the Lebanon crisis was "every bit as much political as military, possibly more so." He said he hopes to be "as helpful as I can to our military and civilian authorities" and to return in a week or 10 days.

Murphy said visits to Amman and other Arab capitals were not foreseen in his instructions, but other officials fully expected him to go to Amman. They said his judgment would weigh heavily in U.S. decisions on whether intervention in Lebanon should be followed by intervention in Jordan, and whether Jordan should become a base for restoring Hashemite rule over Iraq.

These will be the key subjects also in Secretary Lloyd's round of talks here Thursday.

President Eisenhower meanwhile has received a message from the heads of government of Turkey, Pakistan and Iran congratulating him on the "bold and appropriate decision" to send American troops to Lebanon. They said the move would strengthen faith in United States leadership "for the defense of free nations."

Iraq Rebels Warned By Jordan

Iraqi troops that had recently been stationed in Jordan under the joint command had returned to their own country under orders of the new revolutionary Junta.

Baghdad radio also announced that there was complete calm through the country, normal internal services were being resumed and railroads were beginning to operate again following the overthrow of the monarchy two days ago.

Nevertheless, there is still no direct communication with Baghdad from the outside world and news of events there still came here only through Baghdad radio.

Commercial air traffic to and from Baghdad has been closed since the coup.

The military regime in Baghdad, which has clamped down a total censorship on all news, permitted an Iraqi employee of the Associated Press to send the first dispatch out of the country Wednesday.

Russia Hints Reliance on U.N.

countries would follow Moscow's example.

Moscow's formal statement on the Lebanon intervention by United States Marines was delivered to Amb. Llewellyn E. Thompson Jr. before it was released at a press conference. It differed from the Soviet declarations and warning notes at the time of the Anglo-French invasion of Egypt in the fall of 1956.

There was no suggestion in the statement or in the Soviet press today that "volunteers" in the Soviet Union or elsewhere were interested in joining what is referred to here as the Arab Movement for National Liberation. The organization of volunteer units was part of the Soviet reaction to the 1956 Suez crisis.

The statement was uninhibited, however, in its denunciation of the Marine landings. Such "open aggression," Moscow declared, has "created a situation that is truly alarming and dangerous for the cause of universal peace."

"The Soviet government insistently calls upon the government of the United States to stop the armed interference in the internal affairs of the Arabian countries and to withdraw immediately their troops from Lebanon," it declared.

The U.N. General Assembly and the Security Council, Moscow said, "must undertake the most urgent and resolute measures to stop the aggression and to defend the national independence of the Arabian nations subjected to unprovoked attack."

Further Soviet moves to obtain U.N. condemnation of the U.S. action in Lebanon were foreshadowed by the charge that the United States had committed a "rude violation" of the U.N. charter. Moscow condemned what it called Washington's efforts to present the Security Council with "an accomplished fact" and "by means of pressure to obtain from the United Nations approval of its one-sided aggressive actions."

President Eisenhower's statement that the Marines were sent to Lebanon to protect American citizens and U.S. national interests were denounced in the statement as "a mockery" of U.N. principles.

Lebanon is thousands of miles from the United States and "cannot in any way threaten the security and interests of the United States," Moscow said. "On the contrary, it added, 'the main danger to the independence of that small country' was the U.S. intervention itself."

The Soviet Union said it knew of no "norms of international law" that sanctioned military intervention to protect American citizens in a foreign country. This, it said, has been historically "a favorite maneuver of colonialists to justify pirate attacks."

The real reason for the intervention, the statement claimed, was the desire of Western "oil monopolists" to maintain their domination over Arab nations and the desire of the United States to make up for "the obvious failure" of the Baghdad Pact and the Eisenhower Doctrine.

Moscow contended that President Eisenhower's reference to developments in Iraq as a contributing factor to the Lebanon intervention was proof that the Marine action was aimed "against all freedom-loving countries." The Soviet statement was full of praise for Iraq's new military regime.

Reinforced Marines Push On Into Beirut landing in the north near Tripoli or anywhere else.

Asked about the capacity of his force he said:

"There's a great deal of power with it. There's a lot of fire power."

The troops that moved into town today had Patton tanks and huge amphibious armored vehicles known as landing vehicles tank. They also have brought ashore field artillery.

As they moved today, aircraft from the carrier Essex, which is out of sight over the horizon, were patrolling overhead.

Besides the airport and port, the residence of the U.S. ambassador was put under guard of Marine armored vehicles.

The move into the city began at 1:20 p.m.

Groups of spectators along the way waved and shouted to them. There were no real crowds and no real signs either of enthusiasm or resentment.

The commercial center of the city was more completely closed up than in any recent period but there was no sign of rebel reaction.

The rebels' public address system in the Basta district has been calling on supporters not to fire on the Lebanese army but has not specifically exhorted them to assault the Marines.

The move into town followed prolonged talks by U.S. Ambassador Robert McClintock and Admiral Holloway with Gen. Fuad Shehab, commander in chief of the Lebanese army.

Holloway said tonight: "We exercised restraint, making it easy for the army to collaborate, which they did. As a demonstration the ambassador, General Shehab and I led the column into the port area."

They did so with a Lebanese military escort and flags flying while armored landing vehicles rumbled behind them.

Before that the three leaders stood and parleyed on the road to the airport while an impressive column of armored vehicles manned by Marines stood by.

Holloway and his staff arrived by air early today from London. As commander in chief Eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean he has over-all command of the operation here.

At 1:15 p.m. a first group of three huge landing vehicle tanks rumbled forward, escorted by Jeeps of Lebanese soldiers.

McClintock led the way in his official car with Admiral Holloway and General Shehab.

Reactions depend on political views. Most of the people of Beirut are pleased to see this massive instrument for backing up the forces of law and order. They are also a little apprehensive at the sight of so much fighting equipment moving into town.

Government supporters are greatly encouraged by the proof that the United States is backing up its pledge to protect Lebanon's "integrity and independence."

The opposition naturally is displeased and has made violent comments, most of which were suppressed by the censors.

The Marines were briefed at length before landing on their mission here, with heavy emphasis on the fact that they were coming into a friendly country at the request of its government.

They did not know until 4 a.m. Tuesday, 11 hours before they landed, that they were going to land. During the interval they were lectured on the reasons for going in.

According to the U.S. embassy here, the landing was to guarantee the safety of the nearly 4,000 Americans here.

Motorcade Defended By Jenkins

By HERMAN HANCOCK

Police Chief Jenkins said Wednesday he authorized an Atlanta police escort for a motorcade to Dublin for opening the campaign of Ernest Vandiver for the governorship of Georgia.

He said it was done for the security of a large group of Atlantans making the trip. Ald. Jesse Draper, Vandiver's campaign manager for Fulton County, made the request and Superintendent Jeff Sikes, head of the traffic division, led the group.

Mayor Hartsfield said he did not know about the police car leading the motorcade until the day after the trip. He said had he known of it ahead of time, "I would not honestly say whether I would have approved."

Paces Ferry Zoning

Ald. Draper Wednesday said he will not fight to rezone a for business use a tract in the Andrews drive, Paces Ferry place, Irby avenue and West Paces Ferry road area. The announcement following refusal of the joint Atlanta-Fulton County Planning Board to approve the proposal.

Board members took the position that the rezoning is "premature" after a large delegation opposed it. Draper said he does not agree, but that he will not insist in the face of the opposition.

The planning group, headed by Sam R. Young, also approved nine petitions, adverse six other petitions and held two others for further study.

Other measures rejected affected sites at Cascade avenue and Rogers avenue, SW; Lakewood avenue, SE, near Nelms drive; Mell and McLendon avenues, NE; two affecting North Highland avenue, NE, near Lanier place, and Beecher road and Rte. U.S. 41.

Held were petitions affecting sites at Forrest Park road and South River, and McLendon avenue, NE, near Moreland avenue. All other petitions were approved.

$550,000 Buildings

Permits for construction of two structures costing more than $550,000 were issued Wednesday by Building Inspector William R. Wofford, who also reported that values of construction authorized thus far this month exceeds $2,500,000. The figure compares with $4,631,000 authorized for July last year.

Atlanta Newspapers, Inc., obtained a permit to make renovations at the garage at 5 Fairlie St., NW, costing $250,000 with E. Jack Smith doing the work. A permit for construction of the $327,000 Tuxedo school at 4191 Northside Dr., NW, also was issued. Central Construction Co. will do the work. The school will have 16 classrooms, a cafeteria, library, auditorium and other facilities.

Warner Robins Paving Error Laid To Lawson

The Atlanta Journal said Wednesday that Chief State Investigator Roger H. Lawson erroneously reported the contents of a State Highway Department file on some Warner Robins street paving work.

Lawson investigated charges by the Journal concerning the street paving and reported to Gov. Griffin last Saturday that no irregularities were involved.

The newspaper said Wednesday that Lawson in his report cited two lists of streets on a map in the highway department's file on the Warner Robins work whereas only one list actually appears on the map.

Lawson said he would not concede "any discrepancy" in his report without seeing the map side-by-side with his report.

Youth Wounded As Peeping Tom

A Peeping Tom suspect wounded by rifle fire Wednesday was held at city jail for investigation of attempted burglary, police said.

Patrolmen H. N. Shelton and H. A. Quave said Benny Hector, 17, Negro, of 378 Connally St., SE, appeared at Grady Hospital for treatment of bullet wounds in the chest and thigh and insisted that he did not know who shot him.

However, patrolmen said Charles Merck, 17, of 129 Woodward Ave., SE, told them he opened fire with a rifle on a man who first peeped in a window and then attempted to break in the back door at his home.

Guard Fired After 3 Flee Road Gang

A Decatur County Prison Branch guard has been fired for allowing three prisoners to escape. Corrections Director Jack M. Forrester revealed Wednesday.

He identified the guard as Mosby Barwick.

The three convicts are still at large. They are: Walter L. Stringer, 22; John H. Touchstone, 37, and Joseph R. Ward, 29.

Forrester said records show the escape occurred in the following manner:

A detail from the prison branch was working on State Hwy. 179 last Monday. At lunchtime, the prisoners ate around the prison bus, which had been pulled to the side of the road.

Rain started to fall, and the guard ordered the convicts on board the bus.

The guard failed to count his prisoners, and three were left behind, Forrester said. Acting Supt. J. J. Laing fired the guard immediately for negligence, records show.

Naked as a Jaybird, He Becomes Jailbird

Patrolmen S. F. Wiggins and L. F. Burch said they observed an auto on Hollywood road, near Peyton road, NW, with the license plate covered up. The driver attempted to escape, patrolmen said, and they blocked the car.

Burch said he jumped into the auto and found to his amazement that the driver was wearing not a single stitch. He was held at city jail for suspicion of molesting women.

$20,000 Ordered Paid for Tift Road Right

The Court of Appeals held Wednesday that the State Highway Department must pay $20,000 for highway right of way which the owner originally valued at $6,000.

The opinion affirmed a Tift Superior Court jury award to W. F. Zimmerman for 2,539 acres of land near Tifton for a project known as the "Highway 41 bypass."

The state began condemnation proceedings in April 1956. Zimmerman, in his answer, fixed the value of the land at $5,000 and consequential damages at $1,000. A board of assessors was appointed and they awarded $6,008.50 on May 31, 1956.

On Feb. 11, 1957, Zimmerman amended his answer to fix the value of the land at $18,483 and consequential damages, and on June 6, 1957, filed another amendment changing the figures to $36,255 and $21,785.

On trial, the jury awarded $15,000 for value of the land and $5,000 for consequential damages. The state, in appealing to the Court of Appeals, contended that the trial judge charged the jury on limited-access roads but failed to instruct them on local service roads. But the Court of Appeals held that point was without merit and affirmed the jury award.

WIN THIS MONEY!

ONLY ONE MAN KNOWS

An officer of the First National Bank of Atlanta is the only person who knows the exact amount of money in the "Stacks-O-Cash." The correct total is sealed in an envelope, locked in the vault, and will not be opened until the contest is over.

ENTER CORNFIELD STACKS-O-CASH CONTEST

(OVER $2,000 UNDER $10,000)

Enter this exciting contest right away! You stand as good a chance as anyone to win this whole stack of money. And just think what you could do with it!

EASY FUN FOR ALL!
All you have to do is complete this simple jingle:

Cornfield meats are really great,
Tastiest, tenderest you ever ate,
In every pound you find a treat,

(Fill in this line to rhyme with treat)

Then estimate the amount of money in the Stacks-O-Cash. Complete the jingle and write your estimate on the Official Entry Blank and mail it. That's all!

WHERE TO GET OFFICIAL ENTRY BLANKS

In every package of Cornfield Wieners, Bacon and Cold Cuts, you will find an Official Entry Blank and complete contest rules. Get any of these products and get your entry in the mail as soon as possible.

You may enter as often as you wish—but each entry must be made on an official entry blank found in these Cornfield Products.

EASY CONTEST RULES... READ CAREFULLY

1. Fill in the last line for the jingle on this official entry blank. Then examine the photograph of money carefully. You will notice that every stack of coins is visible. All coins in a single stack are of the same denomination, either pennies, nickels, dimes, quarters, half-dollars, or silver dollars. Estimate your answer and write it on the official entry blank. Print or write plainly. Be sure to include your name and address.
2. Send as many entries as you wish, but each entry must be made on an official entry blank. Entry blanks may be found in Cornfield Wieners, Bacon and Cold Cuts.
3. Mail entries to "Stacks-O-Cash Contest, P.O. Box 6125, Station H, Atlanta 8, Georgia."

4. An amount equal to the stacks of cash will be awarded by Southeastern Research Associates, Inc., on the basis of originality, aptness of thought and accuracy. Decision of the judges will be final. In case of ties between two or more individuals an amount equal to the stacks of cash will be equally divided among them.
5. Entries must be postmarked no later than midnight August 9 and received no later than August 15, 1958. No entries will be returned, and no correspondence entered into. Not responsible for entries lost or delayed in the mail. Entries with inadequate postage will not be considered. All entries become the property of White Provision Company. You accept conditions of these rules when you enter.

6. Anyone may enter the contest, except employees of White Provision Company, its advertising agency, First National Bank of Atlanta, Southeastern Research Associates, Inc., and their immediate families. Contest subject to federal and state regulations.
7. Prize winner will be notified by mail approximately two weeks after the contest closes. Winner's name will be sent on request to anyone sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

GEORGIA'S RURAL MINISTER OF YEAR AND WIFE
Dr. P. W. Tribble, Cumming, Is a Preacher and a Doctor

Misses Banquet

Physician Is Minister Of the Year

By KAY McLEOD

A 70-year-old Baptist preacher-physician Wednesday was named Georgia Rural Minister of the Year.

But, Dr. P. W. Tribble wasn't at Emory to receive the award. He was back in Cumming looking after some sick folks.

The Georgian was one of 14 Southeastern ministers honored at the Rural Minister of the Year Banquet at Emory. The annual recognition is sponsored by the Candler School of Theology at Emory in cooperation with The Progressive Farmer magazine.

Dr. Tribble started his medical practice some 42 years ago. Then 29 years ago, he received a "call" to preach.

Since then he has preached in churches all over Forsyth County. Ten years ago he had to give up both his churches and his medical practice because of ill health.

Doctors told him he'd never stand again. But Doc Tribble fooled all of them. Pretty soon he was back in the pulpit preaching, and in his office treating the sick. For a while he didn't have the strength to stand, so he preached sitting down.

Dr. Tribble doesn't like to talk of himself. "Just tell the people," he says, "my main interest is helping prepare people for the great beyond."

He feels there is a strong tie between the ministries of preaching and healing. "After all, our Lord healed folks when He was here. He ministered to physical needs as well as spiritual."

The other ministers honored at the banquet were:

The Revs. R. Bruce Harper, Texas; R. R. Craig, Okla.; Hugh E. DeLaney, Ky.; Sam N. Varnell, Tenn.; Robert Fuqua, W. Va.; C. O. Greene, N. C.; Russell W. Park, S. C.; Eugene E. Chafin, Va.; Vernon Robinson, Ark.; Albert Neill Storey, Miss.; Paul Leeds, La.; J. Clifton Draper Sr., Ala. and Ernest B. Luttrell, Fla.

Mrs. Hodges Conviction Is Upheld

The Georgia Court of Appeals refused Wednesday to disturb a Fulton County jury's conviction of Mrs. Margaret Josie Hodges on five counts of operating a lottery.

Evidence was sufficient to support the conviction, the appellate court held, and Fulton Criminal Court made no error of law.

Mrs. Hodges has been sentenced to a year on each count.

Three of the counts go back to 1952. They previously had been not pressed by Solicitor John I. Kelly but were included anew in an indictment last year.

The defense made much of a contention that the statute of limitations had passed on those three charges, but the Court of Appeals overruled the contention.

Other main highlights of the lengthy opinion written by Judge Ira Carlisle were:

1. The arresting officer did not violate Mrs. Hodges' rights by struggling with her to keep her from flushing lottery tickets down the commode. "To hold otherwise would be illogical," Carlisle wrote.

2. The trial judge was correct in holding that law enforcement officers did not have to reveal the name of informers upon whose information they acted.

Drive To Block '221' Housing Permits Expected

By GENE BRITTON

An attempt is scheduled to be made Monday to push through the Aldermanic Board a resolution to withhold building permits on all "221" relocation housing throughout the city, the Constitution learned Wednesday.

The measure, if finally approved, could spell death for the city's entire urban renewal program.

But Mayor Hartsfield vowed he would veto the action if the board does pass it.

Meanwhile Wednesday afternoon the Citizens Advisory Committee on urban renewal passed a resolution urging the aldermanic board's urban renewal committee to report unfavorably on any attempt to delay the "221" program.

The renewal threat apparently stems from a resolution introduced last Monday by Fourth Ward Ald. Douglas Wood to withhold the issuance of building permits for the low-cost relocation houses in his ward "pending further studies" of the housing situation.

The resolution was referred to the board's urban renewal committee, which has not yet acted on it.

Urban renewal officials and a number of aldermen said an attempt will be made either to amend the Wood resolution to extend its effects to the entire city or to get passed a completely new resolution.

Col. Malcolm Jones, the city's urban renewal director, said the resolution would "give us a black eye from the federal government," which bears two-thirds of the cost of the urban renewal slum clearance and redevelopment program.

"I anticipate that if the resolution passes they (the federal government) will withdraw their allocation for Atlanta," he said. The government has earmarked more than $12 million for its share in the Atlanta projects.

The government has imposed a Dec. 15 deadline for the city to submit all its final plans. The plans must include assurances in black and white that the city has a workable plan for relocating families displaced by slum clearance and other governmental action.

Most observers feel that if the "221" program—which was slow in getting off the ground anyway—should come to a standstill at this time, it might completely stymie urban renewal.

City Atty. Jack Savage Wednesday told Mayor Hartsfield that, even if passed, the resolution would not be legal.

"Certainly any ordinance that prohibited a certain type of financing would be illegal," he said. "I don't think they could do that even in Russia."

Mayor Hartsfield said he would refuse to sign "any such ordinance" on the grounds that it is illegal.

Savage said the passage of the resolution could be damaging, regardless of its legality, however, since City Building Inspector W. R. Wofford could, if he chose, enforce it until the courts made an official ruling.

Hamilton Douglas, chairman of the aldermanic urban renewal committee, said he intends to fight the resolution if it comes to the floor Monday.

Douglas said it would be illegal to hold up a builder's right to build simply because of the type of financing he chose. He said passage of the resolution would be a serious blow to the "ultimate success" of urban renewal in Atlanta.

Alderman Wood could not be reached for comment.

Chief Asks One-Man Police Cars

Police Chief Jenkins Wednesday night urged the aldermanic board's police committee to approve using one man instead of two in police radio cars in order to provide police holidays and spread enforcement.

Committee members took the proposal under advisement.

Jenkins said around-the-clock one-man operations would save at least 60 men, but asked that it first be tried from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m. and save some 30 to 38 men, being extended to night hours after a trial period.

MORE TROUBLE

Alderman Charlie Leftwich, committee member, warned that policemen would be "getting into more trouble and we probably would have more injuries among law enforcement personnel."

Jenkins said surveys show that more than one man are needed in only 10 to 15 per cent of calls answered. He said an officer could radio for aid and "it would be available in a matter of minutes."

"Kansas City probably is the largest city in the country which is using the one-man operation," Jenkins added. "Police officials have discussed it for years, and it now looks like a method of spreading enforcement with the same manpower."

He said if the plan is made operative throughout the department, he would want to place another 15 radio cars in service and would strengthen enforcement in other areas.

Jenkins argued that other city employees get holidays, but that policemen gave them up when a six-day work week was instituted. At present, policemen get 21 days vacation, while most other city workers get 14 days.

TOWING AREAS

A move to divide towing areas so that the service would be provided by three garage operators instead of two was deferred.

The committee:

1. Voted to revoke the car-hire permits issued to William H. Sheffield and William Grady Smallwood.

2. Made optional the removing of ties and opening of shirt collars for officers and men of the department. There was some protest against a committee decision making open shirt collars uniform for the summer months. R. B. Sims asked that officers and men be permitted to cut sleeves off their uniform shirts during the summer months, but the committee took no action.

3. Voted to adverse an application for a liquor store permit at the South Expressway and Bryant street, SE.

Vanderbilt Has Heart Device

NASHVILLE, Tenn., (AP)—Doctors at Vanderbilt University said Wednesday they have developed the world's most versatile mechanical heart for use in diagnosing human heart ailments.

Dr. Elliot V. Newman, head of an eight-man staff of doctors, physicists and engineers who developed the mechanical device, said it is a complicated maze of tubes, electric eyes, batteries and pumps.

"This heart is the most important advance that has been made in the diagnosis and location of heart disease," Dr. Newman said.

Dr. Newman said the mechanical heart has already been used in the successful diagnosis on human patients.

East Point Annexes 2 Miles

East Point grew by about two square miles Wednesday as the result of an annexation referendum.

The vote was 63 for, 28 against. Mayor J. G. Stith said East Point would immediately begin service to the city's new 200 to 250 residents, most of whom live in the Washington road area.

He said workmen will begin laying water mains in the area in the next few days.

The annexation embraces Land Lots 1, 2 and 31 in the 13th District, Lots 225, 226, 255 and 256 in the 14th District and about one-half of lot 224 in the 14th District.

Lt. Gov. Ernest Vandiver will be honored at a $50 a plate fund-raising dinner for his gubernatorial campaign by the Fulton County Vandiver Club here Aug. 11.

Vandiver will be the main speaker at the dinner that will be held at the Dinkler Plaza Hotel.

Tickets may be ordered through Fulton County Vandiver headquarters located in the Henry Grady Hotel. Jesse Draper is head of Vandiver's campaign in Fulton County.

Illness of 200 Blamed on Eggs

VALDOSTA (AP)—Impure powdered eggs caused the illness of more than 200 students in the Lake Park School last May, the Valdosta Times said it learned Wednesday.

The newspaper "said its source of information, who asked that his name not be used, reported the eggs came from the U.S. government as part of the school food surplus program."

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION, Thursday, July 17, 1958 21

It quoted the informant as saying the federal food and drug administration looked into the case, decided on the cause and "apparently withheld releasing any information."

In Atlanta, however, John W. Sanders, head of the food and drug administration's regional office, said an inquiry by his agency failed to show conclusively what caused the poisoning.

All of the victims recovered without apparent after-effects.

Men's Club To Display Hobbies

By YOLANDE GWIN

"The Madam's Hobby" according to the members of the Men's Garden Club can be a widely diversified subject.

In fact, the menfolk have become so intrigued with the idea they have decided to do something about it.

"We thought we would have something just for the girls when we have our show at the Southeastern Fair on Oct. 2-3," said Barney Kennedy, club treasurer who is in charge of the horticultural exhibits for the event. "We are going to set up a section to be called 'The Madam's Hobby.' There will be 36 feet of table space allotted for the section. It will provide space for six entries. Any hobby of a member's wife is eligible for showing. The collections may be needlepoint, knitting, crocheting or anything else."

Mr. Kennedy said, that the first six calls he gets from other men's wives will be the chosen few to exhibit at the show.

Hobbies can start the wheels of imagination into every direction imaginable. Suppose it's cooking? Would she use a frying pan or a coffee pot for her container? Or would she have a miniature oven as a focal point.

Or suppose she collects birds or goldfish or old coins or stamps? If she is fashion conscious there is always that possibility of filling a hat or some shoes with some buds or blossoms. But women have strange tastes, so the show should be one of the most interesting ever sponsored by the men.

Rappe Retires

Among other news bits about the club is the announcement of the retirement of E. H. Rappe as vice president. Mr. Rappe is being transferred by his company to Columbia, S.C. Charles Hudson, past president of the local club as well as the Men's Garden Club of America, and Hugh Howell have been named delegates to the national convention in Cleveland, Ohio, on Aug. 19-22.

Caladium in Color

"Caladiums for Color" is the title of an article in a current national magazine by Mildred Miller Snyder, wife of Paul J. Snyder, a club member.

Lawton, Mobley Plans Told

Miss Sue Lawton and her fiancé, John H. Mobley II, have chosen Saturday, Aug. 9, as their wedding date, the ceremony to take place at 8:30 o'clock at All Saints' Episcopal Church.

Following the nuptial service, Miss Lawton's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Davant Lawton, will entertain at a reception.

The bride-elect will be attended by her sister, Miss Ann Evans Lawton, as maid of honor. Her bridesmaids will include the future bridegroom's sister, Mrs. James D. Overstreet Jr.; the bride-elect's cousin, Miss Eleanor Lawton Reynolds of Ware Shoals, S.C.; Miss Newell Bryan of Cleveland, Ohio; Mrs. Henry T. Killingsworth Jr. of Glenview, Ill.; Miss Susan Coltrane, Mrs. Spencer W. Smith and Mrs. Marion D. Har-

Brilliant Colors, Fabrics Enliven Fall Fashions

By RAYMONDE ALEXANDER

NEW YORK—While silhouette is important if you would be fashionable this fall, it certainly isn't everything.

Color and fabric are of such changed personality that designers are playing with them like they haven't for years—almost to the point of seeming preoccupied with just what can be achieved with their newness rather than with creating new designs.

You will have a whole host of new names with which to become acquainted—new families and new ways of old friends. Tweeds are looped, brushed and nubbled like French knots. Much is made over boucle, maitelasse, and lame. Warp-printed silks including satin, taffeta, and faille are producing a soft, blurred effect that is seen in every collection for almost any occasion wear.

FABRIC NAMES

Coupe de velour, soufflé, eponge, peau d'ange, and gros de londre are just a few of the fabric names that are apt to become household words after this fall and winter.

And evening fabrics have never glittered and twinkled with such brilliance, as many are woven or made solid with sequins, paillettes, and bugle beads. Miles of cobwebby silk chantilly lace are rolling out as over-dresses for figure-forming sheaths.

Patterned fabrics are making the most of color as the entire spectrum either appears in print or solid. Printed mohair coatings, printed wool challis, and even cloth-of-gold is not unusual. There are lots of plaids and checks in coats, suits, and dresses—some huge horse blanket blocks but more in discreet size—for evening as well as day.

Colors are intense but less staccato. Reds, greens, and mid-blues glow like jewels. White goes right on into winter in wool. Violet and purple in every hue speak gently but carry much impact. Shades of rose varying from old rose to brilliant pink glow with high fashion as they move up the color scale.

The importance of fabric and color is very much in evidence as it was underscored by the showings of Edward Abbott, Brannell, and Frechtel.

ELONGATED LOOK

Abbott's elongated, lean look emphasized by a high moulded bosom drew applause in silk chiffon, lace, peau d'ange, matt jersey and crepe. Fabrics with drifting motion made a point of his leaning to the fitted sheath inside and the loose look over-dress.

Brannell works wonders in tiny jacket suits with lamore, a real fur processed lamb that is treated like fabric with dressmaker rather than furrier handling. Hilda Altmann, designing for Brannell, endorses the waistline as well as the unfitted silhouette.

Fur trimmings are again lavishly used and of precious quality.

Frechtel's collection glows with color and multi-color as in stained glass woollens and cream to soft mocha shades. Suits, costumes and the majority of coats are basically slim. More suits than not fall into either trapeze or round jacket contours. A suggestion of the Empire line appears in abbreviated jacket suits.

Collars continued to show news. Frechtel does it with a flat cardigan collar. Originala presents them both large and small. All tend to be gracefully stand-offish, framing rather than touching the neckline.

Seen throughout the Originala collection in slender Empire and triangular silhouettes are shaggy mohairs called soufflé. All fluffy, weightless, and warm, they belie their bulky look. One features a double-layered and oversize cape-collared that has been a trend all week at the Dress Institute.

Fur as lining for coats is rampant and the surprise is that these fur linings don't give a hint of bulk. The look is every bit as slim as cloth lined coats. Many fur linings button in and out so that the fur lining alone may be used as cocktail coats.

Evening wear is showing the least break with tradition as the short, bell shape skirt with fitted bodice dominates.

Ceil Chapman does move from the sculptured line for which she is noted, in a more relaxed direction. Her lavish gowns feature fronts that are always figure-conscious, either subtly cut or softly "blown" against the body. The back or sides look windswept in floating and flying free in loose drapery or deep folds.

GLITTER AND GRANDEUR

The glitter and grandeur, synonymous with the Chapman names, is summed up in a group of "Diamond Horseshoe" fabrics ranging from metallic damask with a flowered background to a blaze of solid hand-sewn paillettes. Many have hems of precious fur.

Far afield from collections already seen is the Luis Estevez interpretation of fall. His fashions are extremely short, some as high as 22 inches from the floor.

His three sack and two trapeze models, midst a collection made up almost entirely of form-fitting and sexy silhouettes, seem almost taken in recognition of the relaxed feeling that is general.

Let's Go Marketing

You Can't Go Wrong With Cantaloupes Now

By VIRGINIA DYSARD

Constitution Food Editor

Picking out the best cantaloupe in the store display counter is not the easiest assignment, but with so many good ones on the market, you can't often go wrong. These flavorful muskmelons are in their peak of supply and deserve to be eaten.

Along with cantaloupe there is a big crop of watermelons this year. For this reason there are big green watermelons within budget reach. Peaches of semi-cling and freestone varieties are appearing on the market with larger volumes expected during the next few weeks. The freestones are usually preferred for canning and freezing.

COOKING APPLES

Cooking apples are showing up on the market after their short absence. The quality of these is good. Lemons are moderately priced and quality is good.

One glance at the vegetable counter will boost the cooks morale sky-high. There is plenty of variety to suit purse and needs. The most reasonable will be locally grown corn, squash, cabbage, eggplant and okra.

FRESH CORN

Fresh corn will be wearing attractive-to-the-shopper price tags this week. The sugar in corn, which gives it the sweet flavor, turns to starch soon after gathering, this action is slowed down by icing it right after picking, and by keeping it cold. For best quality and flavor, be sure to select corn that is kept cool, then use it as soon as possible.

Mrs. Betty Alexander, extension consumer information specialist, recommends that in selecting squash, buy that which is free from bruises, heavy for size, with tender appearing rind. Keep this squash in the refrigerator in a moisture-proof container. Plan to use it in a few days.

CUCUMBERS AND PEPPERS

Cucumbers and green peppers remain at last week's level and the quality is excellent. Tomato prices may increase since local growers have been hampered by too much rain. Lettuce and carrots remain at last week's levels.

As for meats in the last several weeks, there is little change. The best bet is still a variety of "specials" that can give comparative economy if you shop carefully. Round steak, chuck roast and smoked picnics are among the better choices.

Golf Foursome Returns From Scotland Links

A golf foursome, composed of Henry Grady, William A. Parker, William C. Wardlaw and Ralph Paris, had always had a hankering to play on Scotland's famed Glen Eagles course. So they planned a trip to Europe especially for that purpose.

The Wardlaws were not able to make the trip because of the impending arrival of a grandchild, but the other three golfers and their wives left early in June to fly to Scotland. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. James M. Harrison, with Mr. Harrison, of course, completing the foursome.

The group is expected home today, having returned this week on the Queen Mary. After their golfing orgy in Scotland, the party split up for a jaunt to the continent, with the Grady and the Parkers going to Norway and Sweden, the Parkers and the Harrison to Vienna and Paris.

The group has the distinction of being the only European travelers who did NOT visit the World's Fair.

MRS. RICHARD D. KING and Mrs. Fred W. Turner are back home after 10 days at High Hampton Inn, Cashiers, N.C. They returned on Sunday.

MOVING to Washington, D.C., at an early date are Misses Signe and Linda Eklund, daughters of the Carl Eklunds. Mr. Eklund, who spent the past 18 months in the Antarctic with the U.S. Geophysical Year experiment, is assistant director of fish and wildlife in the Department of Interior. During his absence, Mrs. Eklund and their daughters lived in Santiago, Chile. Their German short-haired pointer, Pooshie, will, of course, go along when they move to the national capital.

Mrs. Eisenhower—a handsome silver tray. But they rejoiced with the lovely bride over the brand-new silver blue car among her gifts.

The car was a present from members of the Augusta National Golf Club. Helen's mother, Mrs. Jewett H. Harris, serves as secretary to Cliff Roberts, the club president, and he and his staff wanted to do something special for her daughter. So they pooled their resources to buy her a car.

WHEN BOBBY ISON JR. returns next week from Camp Sea Gull, Arapahoe, N.C., he will find his family in a new home. Mr. and Mrs. Ison and their other children, Blair, Lindsey and Betsy, moved last week to 3397 Rillman Rd., and are now in the throes of getting settled.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Hardwick have bought the former Ison home at 46 Camden Rd.

MISS LYNNE SNYDER, daughter of Mrs. Wilson Kemp, who is traveling in Europe with a group of Atlanta girls, will return on Aug. 15 to plunge immediately into preparations for entering Rollins College in September.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES BREMER SR. arrived yesterday from Palestine, Tex., to attend the marriage of their son, Charles Bremer Jr., to Miss Jane Callahan, which takes place on Saturday morning in the Walters Chapel of St. Mark Methodist Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Bremer will entertain at dinner tomorrow evening at Hart's, following their son's wedding rehearsal.

ATLANTA GIRLS looking forward to a month at Camp Chattahoochee are Judy Johnson, Susan Johnston, Lolly Magnuson and Susan Snowden. The foursome leaves this week for the camp at Tallulah Falls.

A SECOND DAUGHTER has arrived at the Moores Mill road home of Dr. and Mrs. James D. Hodnett. Born on July 13 at Georgia Baptist Hospital, the baby has been named Margaret Ann. Her mother is the former Yvonne Maxwell of Lake City, Fla.

DURING HARRY C. KOPCKE'S ABSENCE in Canada on a business trip, Mrs. Kopcke and her sister, Mrs. Edwin Gibbins, are visiting in Knoxville and Maryville, Tenn., for a few days.

Goodrich, Amisano Vows Said

Mrs. Arthur L. Goodrich of Clinton, Miss., announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Rosellen Goodrich of Atlanta, to Joseph Amisano of New York City and Atlanta.

The ceremony took place on Saturday in the gardens at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Raymond G. Ling, with the Rev. James T. Ford, as officiant. Mr. Amisano is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Amisano of New York City.

John Wright Goodrich of Jackson, Miss., gave his sister in marriage. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Walden G. Housman of Winchester, Ky., as matron of honor, and her small niece, Suzanne Ellen Ling, was her flower girl.

Henry J. Toombs of Atlanta was best man for Mr. Amisano.

Miss Roach To Wed Mr. Cook

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Roach Sr. of Woodstock announce the engagement of their granddaughter, Miss Laquita Joyce Roach, to James Parks Cook, son of Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Cook of Copperhill, Tenn.

The marriage will take place on July 27 at Bascomb Methodist Church in Woodstock.

The daughter of Mrs. Leroy Hardin of Warner Robins, Miss Roach was graduated in 1955 from Robert L. Osborne High School where she was a member of the Beta Club, Glee Club and FHA. She is employed by Dr. R. Glenn Reed Jr. in Marietta.

Mr. Cook attended high school at Murphy, N.C.

Beauty Is Minor Role For Contest Winners

By HARRIETTE SCHREIBER

Beauty is only a small part in choosing a beauty contest winner, report judges of various local and state contests.

Actually, the misnomer occurs when people limit the word "beauty" to only face and dimensions because contest judges use the word in a broader meaning.

"Beauty is that quality or combination of qualities which affords keen pleasure to the senses, especially that of sight, or which charms the intellectual or moral faculties," the dictionary explains.

And in the parlance of contest judges, the "whole person" rather than merely face or figure is judged to select the finalists. After the number is narrowed, it is then more a question of which face is more pleasing or which figure more nearly perfect.

But in order to get to the finalist stage, the judges offer some hints to the entries as well as to any woman who wishes to present herself most effectively:

First, develop what is known in the theater as "stage presence." This quality is a combination of poise and personal attractiveness and is the thing which makes a judge enjoy looking at a person.

Next, learn to handle yourself well in motion. This combines good posture with graceful movement.

Third, practice a natural but effective projection of personality which brings into being a harmony of appearance, personality and expression.

These points carry through into the selection of a winner from the finalists with the judges then basing selection on which of the girls has the most of these desirable traits or training.

Youths to Go To Red Cross Conference

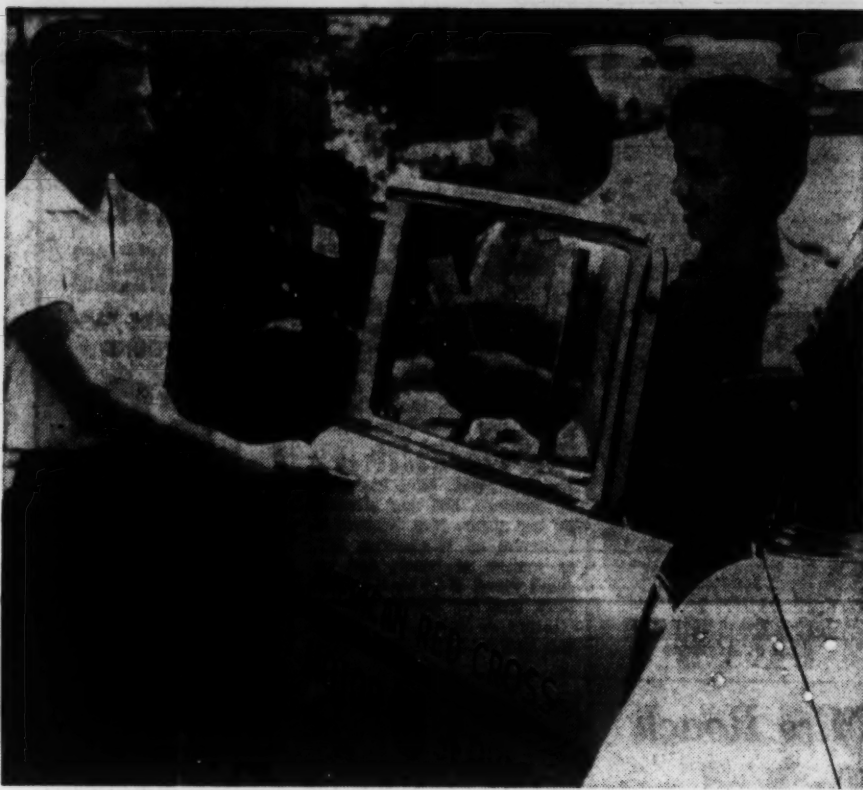

The Greater Atlanta Red Cross Chapter-wide High School Council has named four delegates to the American Junior Red Cross, Southeastern area, leadership training center.

The students who will attend the center at Gulf Park College, Long Beach, Miss., July 20-27, are Lynn Brauer, Northside High; Sarah Cowart, Milton High; Tommy Chatham, Bass High, and Albert McAuliffe, Southwest High.

The delegates, selected with the approval of the principal and teacher-sponsor in each school, were chosen on the basis of leadership ability, keen sense of responsibility, good citizenship, good academic records, and their active participation in Junior Red Cross.

The training center provides the chapters an opportunity to prepare for more effective leadership in JRC throughout their communities. It also stimulates this leadership into an awareness of the Red Cross organizations and programs. The schedule of activities for delegates includes adult leadership, medical care, extensive programs, discussions, and recreation periods.

A similar training center will be announced the latter part of August, to be held at Camp Green Cove Training Center, Tuxedo, N.C.

Delta Gamma Plans Swimming Party

Members of the Atlanta Alumnae Chapter of the Delta Gamma Fraternity will entertain their escorts at a swimming party on Friday evening, July 18, at the Mount Vernon Woods Pool. Swimming will be from 8:30 until 11:30 p.m.

Mrs. Roy D. Kelley and Mrs. Peter T. Vanson will act as hostesses, assisted by Mrs. Kenneth Champness, social chairman of the chapter.

All Delta Gammas in the area are invited to attend with their escorts. In the event of rain, the party will be postponed until Sunday evening, July 20.

Refreshments, provided by individual members, will be served in the patio.

As part of a busy summer schedule, the Delta Gammas are also completing plans for a benefit bridge party to be held July 30 at the Atlanta Federal Savings and Loan Assn. Building in Buckhead. Proceeds from the bridge party will be used for work on the chapter project of Sight Conservation and Aid for the Blind.

Smith, Black Plans Told

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Smith of Dublin announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Peggy Joyce Smith, to Elbert Wayne Brach, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Brach of Allenton.

The wedding will take place on Sunday, Aug. 17, at the Jefferson Street Baptist Church in Dublin, following the morning services, with the Rev. Frank E. Singleton officiating.

The bride-elect is employed by the C. I. Hilburn Wholesale Company.

Mr. Brach attended Southern Business College in Atlanta. He is now connected with the Southern Railway System at Valdosta.

Celestine Sibley Perspective And Patience

Albert Riley had a piece on the editorial page last week about a young Georgian who is serving as press relations man with the House subcommittee investigating the Goldfine case. A tone of surprise, even awe, ran through Albert's story.

The young man, Bill Martin, 25, of LaGrange, had just finished his stint in the Navy and with no experience beyond that received at the University of Georgia's journalism school, is coping with a tricky and difficult assignment. He is performing, according to Albert, with the poise and intelligence of an old-timer.

Well, I'm surprised, too, but not for the same reason Albert is. I'm surprised that Chatty Martin's son should be that grown-up. But I'm not a bit surprised that he should be a natural in his present job. He comes from a family celebrated for the ease with which it communicates with the human race.

Bill's father, the late Raymond W. Martin Sr., called Chatty, was one of the first people I met in Atlanta and he was largely responsible for my immediate impression that it was a warm, friendly place inhabited by witty wonderful people. Mr. Martin was an assistant U.S. attorney in that big tomb-like gray pile of an Old Post Office—a short, homely man with hair that stuck up in stiff bristles like an old whisk broom, a marvelous vocabulary of country expressions and an outrageous sense of humor.

The day I arrived to cover the federal beat, feeling very much a stranger in a strange land, Chatty Martin peered up at me, heard my name and laughed aloud. The absurdity of a fancy Latin handle on a tall, gawky country-looking woman never failed to entertain him and he promptly changed it to a nickname. (That nickname still survives in some murky corners of the Old Post Office, but, needless to say, I'm not going to air it!)

As all young reporters learn, the federal beat either has big, important stories or it is, news-wise, a Sahara with nothing more readable than a bankruptcy petition or postal receipts. This is hard on a new hand, trying to make an impression on the boss. But thanks to Chatty Martin and many others like him, I found few dull days on the federal beat. The most routine whisky trial would turn into a delightful story because of Chatty's knack for injecting humor and color into any encounter with people—even a moonshiner he was prosecuting.

He had spent much of his childhood in the country in Coweta County and some of his adventures there made marvelously entertaining stories. But, better than that, they supplied him with a basis for understanding the shy, inarticulate countryman and his values. Occasionally, these childhood experiences enabled him to pull off a courtroom coup that would have been a lost cause to a city lawyer. I remember with pleasure the time Chatty trapped a young moonshiner who was weaving himself a handsome alibi on the witness stand, simply because he knew more about buzzards than the witness did.

During the war Chatty's assignment was to prosecute draft dodgers. Aliens were being interned right and left. We were all caught up in a high fever of patriotism and it would have been easy to make a righteous to-do over the craven citizens who were slow to answer the call to the colors.

But here again Chatty Martin's humor, his broad human sympathies, kept him on an even keel. He didn't believe there was much cowardice among his fellow Georgians. The urgency to get into uniform and grab a gun existed all right, and as far as I know he prosecuted competently, every case the FBI brought him.

But he understood how sometimes in the country a far war doesn't seem half so pressing as some matters at hand—a young heifer lost over in the mountains, for instance, or a valued and delicate old coon hound having puppies too late in life.

Patience and perspective. That's what Chatty Martin brought to his dealings with the human race. And if his boy, Bill, can do the same I don't blame the Washington press corps for being gratified.

School Fund Earns State

$9,046,181

The State School Building Authority has earned interest of $9,046,181 on investment of authority funds, Chairman George P. Whitman Jr. said.

In his report to the authority's annual meeting, he said that figure includes interest of $735,591 earned on investment of the hazard reserve fund—the authority's self insurance fund.

The authority also has purchased and canceled $1,090,000 of its own bonds, according to the chairman's report, thereby effecting an interest saving of $447,580.

The authority was created by the 1951 Legislature to finance a 200 million dollar school building program through sale of revenue bonds.

Whitman's report said that of the total of 1,058 projects to be constructed by the authority, 978 or 92.5 per cent have been completed, and 46, or 4.3 per cent are under construction. Two county school systems have not yet submitted their building plans.

Whitman was reelected chairman. State School Supt. Claude Purcell was elected vice chairman to succeed Atty. Gen. Cook who declined reelection, and John E. Sims was reelected executive director.

Labor Chiefs Target of GOP Heads

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate's Republican high command will arm GOP senators Thursday with a fat document with the provocative title: "The Labor Bosses—America's Third Party."

As to be expected, it is a sharp attack on the Democratic Party's ties to organized labor.

While not carrying the explicit endorsement of the Senate GOP leadership, the book was prepared by the staff of the party Policy Committee.

It contains ammunition for use by Republican Senate candidates who want to make an issue on organized labor's role in politics and its alliance with the Democratic Party.

The book contains 159 mimeographed pages, plus tables compiled from public reports filed by labor political organizations under federal law to show campaign contributions and other political spending.

In the foreword to this indictment:

"The hold of the labor bosses on the Democratic Party has, for all practical purposes, rendered responsible Democratic leadership virtually impotent."

Besides the financial reports, the document contains a section on the hearings on the Senate committee investigating labor and management misconduct and another on political labor activity.

The section on the investigation deals only with what was called the "irresistible leadership" of the United Auto Workers, whose president, Walter Reuther, has been a favorite GOP target.

The section on labor political activity describes the AFL-CIO Committee (COPE) as a "political action task force."

Dr. Holley, 84, Albany State Founder, Dies

ALBANY, Ga. (AP)—Dr. Joseph W. Holley, 84, noted Negro educator, author, and founder of Albany State College here, died in a hospital Wednesday of complications following surgery.

An ardent foe of forced integration, Holley's best-known book dealt with the subject and was titled "You Can't Build a Chimney from the Top."

He came to Albany in 1903 as an ordained minister of the Presbyterian Church and started a school for Negroes called the Albany Bible and Manual Training Institute. In 1918 the school was taken over by the state and is now a part of the University System.

Holley will be buried on the college campus in a shady grove known as "Holley's Pines."

7 Jaycees Dock Mississippi Raft

GREENVILLE, Miss. (AP)—Seven Rockport, Ind., Jaycees on a raft landed here Wednesday.

Although the Jaycees are making their Mississippi River trip from Rockport to New Orleans to publicize Rockport's Lincoln sesquicentennial celebration next year, their raft flew the Confederate flag. They got a warm welcome.

"After all," one of the Jaycees said, "Rockport is 18 miles south of the Mason-Dixon Line."

Violence Rips Cyprus

After Curfew Lifting

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP)—A fresh outbreak of violence Wednesday followed a partial lifting of the general standstill order which had quieted this island colony for two days.

Soon after the British curfew was lifted in Larnaka, gunmen killed a Turkish-Cypriot. Another Turkish-Cypriot was shot and critically wounded in Paphos. In both places the curfew was immediately reimposed.

Greer Hendrix

Greer Hendrix, 74, of 315 Elmira Pl., NE, retired Georgia Railroad engineer, died Wednesday in a local hospital.

Mr. Hendrix retired about six years ago from the railroad after 30 years of service. He was a lifelong Atlanta resident. He was a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Division 207.

Funeral arrangements will be announced by Henry M. Blanchard & Son.

Surviving are his wife, the former Mary Henderson, and two sisters, Mrs. Clifford H. Owens and Mrs. Henry Reeves, Atlanta.

KEEP WELL

By THEODORE VAN DELLEN

3 Balanced Meals Are Summer Must

Summer requires a readjustment of living habits. Everybody replaces winter clothes with lighter weight garments to aid in maintaining normal body temperature but it is even more important to adapt our meals to the reduced caloric requirements of hot weather.

Fewer calories are needed but careful meal planning will insure a liberal supply of the minerals and vitamins necessary for optimum health.

Many people make the mistake of substituting snacks and iced, sweetened beverages for regular meals. This haphazard eating may contain more calories than three well-balanced meals and yet be deficient in essential nutrients.

Include in the daily summer diet the same basic foods needed throughout the year. This means: One pint milk; one egg (or at least four per week); two servings meat, fish, poultry or cheese; two or more servings of vegetables; two or more servings of fruit; enriched or whole grain breads or cereals.

Summer is the season when fresh vegetables and fruits are more plentiful and delicious. The color and variety in flavor and texture provided by a crisp vegetable or a chilled fruit salad usually will chase away that "too hot to eat" feeling.

Simple menus are best. The caloric intake can be kept to a minimum when moderate sized portions are eaten and no sugar or additional fats are used.

Those who long for salad dressings, bacon, sugar, jam, or jelly may have them if concessions are made to balance the caloric intake. Substitute skim milk for whole milk, green or yellow vegetables for potatoes, consomme or broth for creamed soups, and fresh or water-pack fruits for dinner desserts.

(We have a five-day summer diet that may be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope with request.)

Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions relating to health and hygiene in his column, and by mail when self-addressed, stamped envelope is enclosed. Letters should be addressed to Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen, c/o The Atlanta Constitution, Atlanta 2, Ga.

STUFFY JOB

Burglars Hit Booby-Trap, Trip Bomb

Burglars found one business booby-trapped.

Patrolmen F. M. Bearden and W. J. Hendrix said they discovered a window broken at Harry Sommers Inc., 446 Spring St., NW, and began searching inside.

Officers said they discovered Willie James Seay, 24, Negro, of a Clifton Street, SE, address, hiding in the trunk compartment of an auto in the service department.

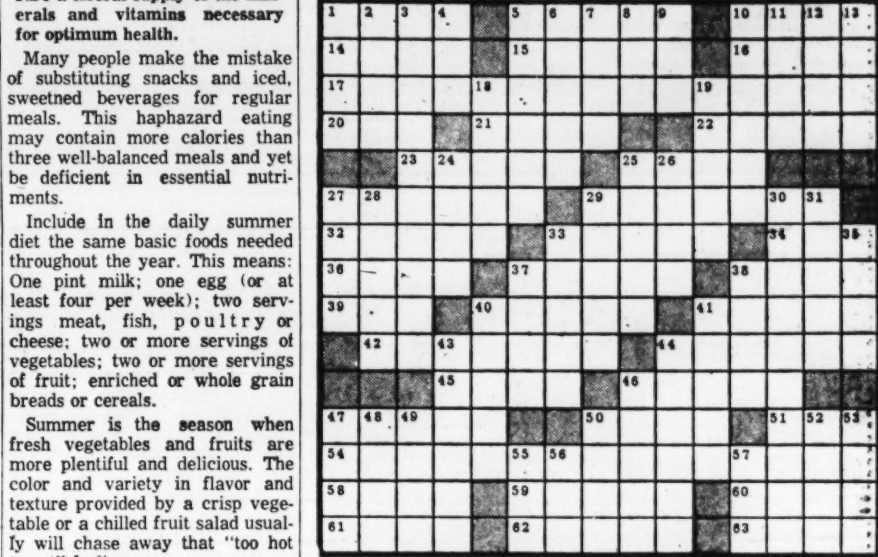

A few moments more and Seay might have suffocated in the airtight compartment, officers said.

They said Seay and three companions broke into the establishment and attempted to open a cigarette machine and the office safe. Tampering with the cigarette machine set off a burglar alarm. Attempts to open the safe exploded a tear gas bomb.

Three fled, but were identified, officers said.

Seay, who attempted to hide in the car, was brought to jail for suspicion of burglary.

REEVES

"Answering a call from Washington (D.C.) hostess, officers find nude lieutenant colonel had crashed the party. 'I did not know he was a colonel,' said the hostess."

—News Item.

An officer should always be... a man of poise and dignity... one with the power to command... who always has himself in hand... and most reluctant to retire... to safety when he's under fire

With shoulders back and head erect... his men look on him with respect... and even those who like him least... admire his savagery and beast... like qualities when in the throes... of battle... when the battle goes... against them, and in their despair... they're heartened just to know he's there.

And in "the piping times of peace"... when for a time he finds release... from duty, he does not forget... his training as a young cadet... and keeps himself as spick and span... as any military man.

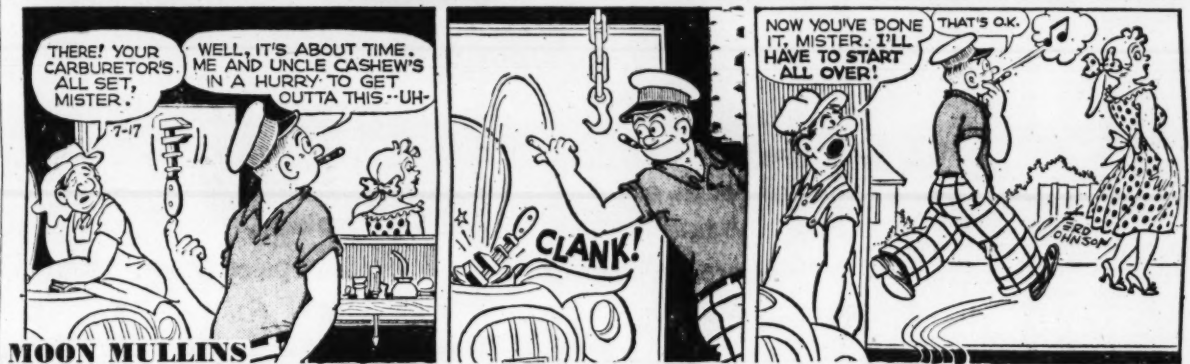

His boots are polished to a sheen... his uniform is pressed and clean... and even in his underwear... he has that military air... that stamps him as a big success... and yet, an officer should dress... in something other than his hide... so he can be identified.

and interest now, and this will continue for a few weeks. Some romantic involvement may be highlighted this month, but you should avoid getting in too deep.

Home life can be expensive, and home improvements are possible. At the end of the year social life is emphasized. Be creative, but do not overexpand. The next six months can be highly romantic and emotional as friends and loved ones stimulate your social life. Dynamic events can be expected.

MONROVIA (AP) — Liberia is letting miners back in the diamond fields it closed last year. Each operator is limited to 20 workmen so the mines will not drain plantations of labor.

YOUR STARS TODAY

Some will never learn anything because they understand everything too soon.

—Blount.

Daily Guide—A rather jumpy day, so take it calmly and don't be in too big a rush to dash on to something else before you have finished what you were doing. There is a steady influence in the background, especially for those with birthdays around April 10 and Aug. and Dec. 13. Concentrate on the practical chores. In the evening spirits are likely to be gay, and some unpredictable, spontaneous fun can be found by doing something unplanned, something different. Changes and erratic behavior can be expected tonight. Don't be reckless, however.

THE FIVE BILLIONTH COPY OF LIFE

One moment, a few days ago, the giant presses stopped and there skittered into the hands of a veteran pressman the Five Billionth Copy of LIFE.

5,000,000,000 COPIES

What does that mean—to us, to you, to the American public?

The question calls for Imagination and for Memory.

Imagine 5,000,000,000 copies! But only the mathematician, the poet of the modern world, can really imagine such a figure. Earthbound, we think of Johnny Appleseed, the beloved little fellow who in the early years of this country walked thousands of miles through the frontiers of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois planting the orchards which now in this summer of 1958 are coming heavy with fruit. How many seeds did Johnny Appleseed plant?

But what matters more than the how many is the what. Johnny Appleseed planted good seed and it grew and it gave growth to man and to nation. Can we of LIFE say the same? We hope so. And we invoke Memory to audit our work.

THE LIVING PAGES OF LIFE

There are the great stories—the great stories of adventure and discovery from every quarter of the globe, from the North Pole and the South, and from all around the equator and from every one of the nations which make up mankind.

There are the beautiful pages, the masterpieces of artists and of nature.

There are the pages which have touched the heart of compassion.

There are the pages of new knowledge fashioning a New America and a New World.

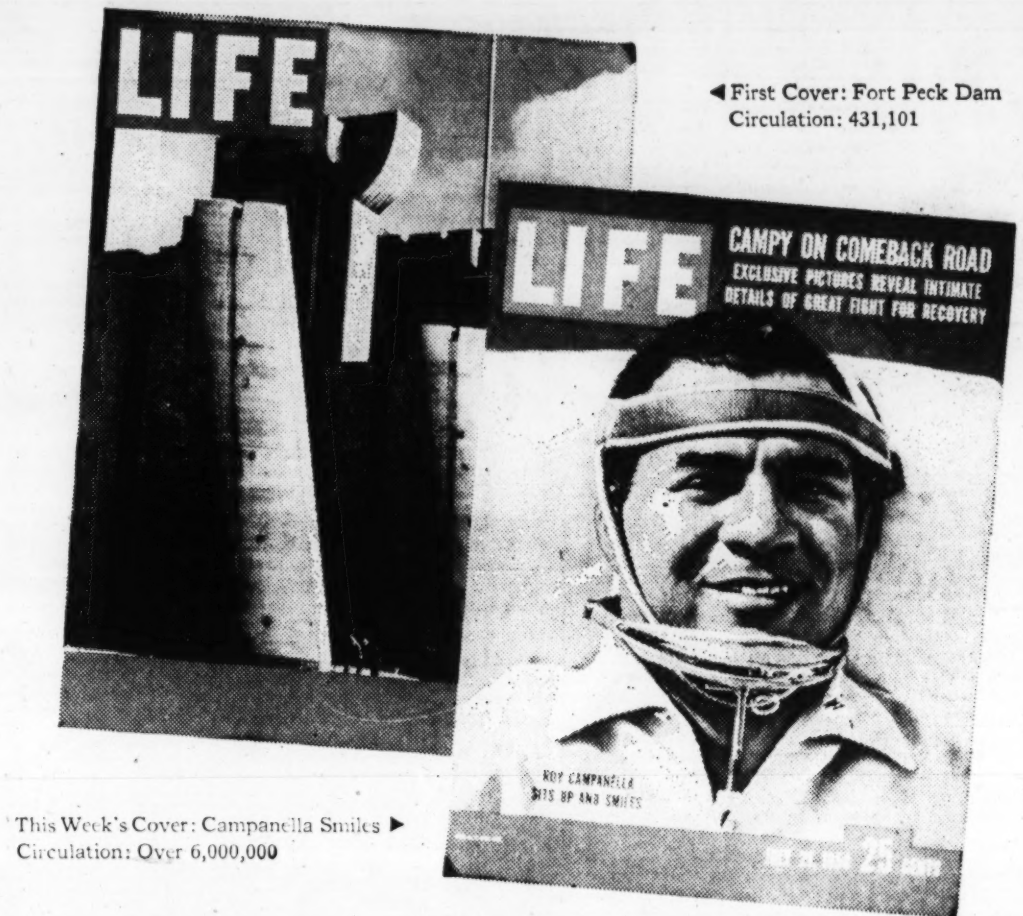

And there are pages of sheer fun.

Go on, we say to Memory: we like this story, this joy of life.

But Memory has something else to say. It has to say that the joy of life is given birth and rebirth only at a great price. This age, like every age, is an age of war and conflict—only now the wars and the conflicts are more massive and more dreadful. LIFE has been, from the beginning, in the midst of the wars and the conflicts. From World War II to the Hungarian Revolt, LIFE was there because it was its professional duty to be there. And for another reason: because LIFE knew what side it was on.

When LIFE took its name, 5,000,000,000 copies ago, it also took up a cause. That cause is to give to our name its fullest, truest meaning.

LIFE, in American terms, is dedicated to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Those words have about the same general meaning for us as they have for others, but also for us, as editors of LIFE, they have, week after week, some special meanings. Meanings like this:

LIFE is dedicated to Life because our job is to observe all that we can of life and to give a vivid account of it. Life on the newsfronts of the world. Life also in the ripening orchard, on the sidewalks of New York, in the factory and in the busy economy of the home.

Dedication to Liberty is, for us, the definition of our editorial policy. LIFE takes its stand. On every issue of the day, using our best fallible judgment, LIFE takes the side that makes for the enlargement and for the deepening of human freedom. LIFE strives to oppose all that is opposed to Liberty.

And the pursuit of happiness? We have never snared and photographed The Blue Bird of Happiness. LIFE has no nostrums to offer you, no capsule pills for peace of mind or soul. But if wise men have rightly given us some clues to Happiness, then we have some specific contributions to make.

To be aware of the world you live in, to see it and meet it as reality rather than illusion, this is a condition of sanity and of happiness—and to this LIFE makes a contribution. To be aware of the world you live in and of the universe it lives in—LIFE keeps that dimension in mind. Finally, to appreciate and to enjoy the best and the most beautiful which men of all ages have thought and made—for this purpose LIFE seeks to be your intelligent and faithful servant.

Rose-Colored Vision

Before the 20th annual All-Star spectacle Wednesday night, Southern Association directors put on rose-colored spectacles and optimistically peered into the bleak future.

The harassed men were laughing and swapping jokes when they opened the doors at the Piedmont Hotel after a lengthy session. They bore no resemblance to baseball operators down to their last few thousand customers.

Outlar

Perhaps they should be applauded for sidestepping reality, at least officially. There were, of course, more furrowed brows than smiles as the directors reviewed mounting problems.

No one ever won a bout with a crying towel, and everyone would like to see the owners in a happy frame of mind all summer.

For some reason, however, a league meeting seems to change the owners' perspective. All season long they have filled sports pages and air waves with attendance pleas. At one time or another, every director has voiced a complaint about the anemic gate take in the league in general and New Orleans in particular.

Yet, President Charlie Hurth emerged from Wednesday's session and emphatically stated that not one official complaint was lodged against the penniless Pels. On the basis of that report, the directors simply don't speak the same language in and out of the conference room.

—The Captain Sticks With the Ship

There has been considerable speculation that the Pels won't survive the present campaign. The treasury is admittedly bare, and only a super campaign by Mayor Chep Morrison and Jack DeFee's generosity have kept the club afloat.

Optimism was the keynote Wednesday. Hurth said that, in his opinion, the same eight clubs not only would close out this season, but would answer the bell next April.

"We went into a full discussion of the 1959 season," Hurth revealed, "and the league definitely intends to operate."

The league punctuated its faith in the future by presenting Hurth a new three-year contract. At least one delegate congratulated Hurth on his misfortune.

You have to admire the man for remaining aboard ship. He can step into a better job any day, but loyalty is one of Hurth's trademarks. He occupied the president's chair during the lush era, and he isn't abdicating now.

Hurth admitted that Atlanta's Triple-A ambitions were discussed, but declined to amplify the statement. Cracker owner Earl Mann wasn't in a talkative mood. He said he did not bring the matter before the group, but added that he "seriously doubted that the same eight clubs would be operating in the Southern Association next season."

Atlanta, New Orleans and Nashville are the teams most likely to be missing from the Southern post parade in 1959. Mann plans to conduct an all-out effort to elevate Atlanta into Triple-A ranks.

New Orleans, mired in the cellar, is no cinch to finish the current campaign. A financial crisis arises each time the Pels file past the pay window.

—An Experiment in the Right Direction

No one, including Ted Murray, seems to know exactly what Ted Murray intends to do in Nashville. The Vol owner has reportedly said that he does not intend to pour any more dough down the drain. He was not present at the Wednesday pow-wow.

It's a solid bet that the Southern will function again next year, but don't lay odds against franchise changes. Shreveport is definitely interested in joining the fraternity. Charlotte, Knoxville and Jacksonville are other prospective members.

The most encouraging news to come out of the meeting was unanimous approval of Mann's experimental plan. Baseball has stubbornly resisted progress down through the years. At long last the Southern, at least, is searching for means to improve a product which isn't selling.

All eight clubs probably will stage five-inning exhibition games featuring new "rules." Two strikes will constitute an out, three balls a walk; free substitution will be employed and pitchers won't bat. Other changes designed to give the game more zip may be tested.

These experiments may reveal what some people have suspected for some time. There's nothing seriously wrong with baseball, except baseball.

In passing it should be noted that the Southern directors will meet in Birmingham on Sept. 8, the day after the regular season ends. They'll probably discard the rose-colored glasses when the financial returns from 1958 are placed in the official ledger. On the other hand, they may not.

Optimistic Hurth Given 3-Year Contract Renewal

Southern Pronounced Fit for '59;
Directors Call Special Meeting

Wearing a "Pollyanna" mask, Southern Association directors Wednesday optimistically put figuratively binoculars on the 1959 baseball season and renewed President Charlie Hurth's contract for three more years.

Hurth, meeting here with the directors on the day of the league's annual All-Star game, is now in his 12th year as president of the Class AA League.

Hurth's election for a fifth three-year term, and his optimistic post-meeting announcements raised a few eyebrows around the circuit. Because the Southern, like many other minor leagues, is beset by serious problems of financial and other natures.

The long-term prexy, whose offices are in New Orleans, announced that in his opinion the same eight clubs would start and finish the 1959 season. He observed that all directors seemed highly optimistic regarding the league's future and that full discussion was made of plans for 1959.

These observations, particularly the one regarding the same eight clubs opening shop at the same old stand, forced listeners into doing double takes.

Because Earl Mann, president-owner of the Crackers, is known to be seeking admission into a Class AAA league. And the belief has been rampant that New Orleans, sorely pressed financially, must throw in the sponge either this season or next.

But so optimistic were the directors that they announced opening and finishing dates for 1959. The season will open, they say, on April 10 and close on Sept. 7. It may be significant, however, that the directors set Sept. 8 of this year, the day after the regular season ends, for a special call meeting in Birmingham.

All directors agreed that Mann's oft-suggested formula for "free-substitution" baseball has enough merit to give it a trial in exhibition games very shortly.

Mann's plan for streamlining the game for speed-up and fan-appeal purposes includes letting only eight players do the batting, excluding the pitcher.

Only two strikes will be permitted each batter, and three balls will constitute a walk. Players taken out of the game may be reinserted, much in the manner of "free-substitution" football.

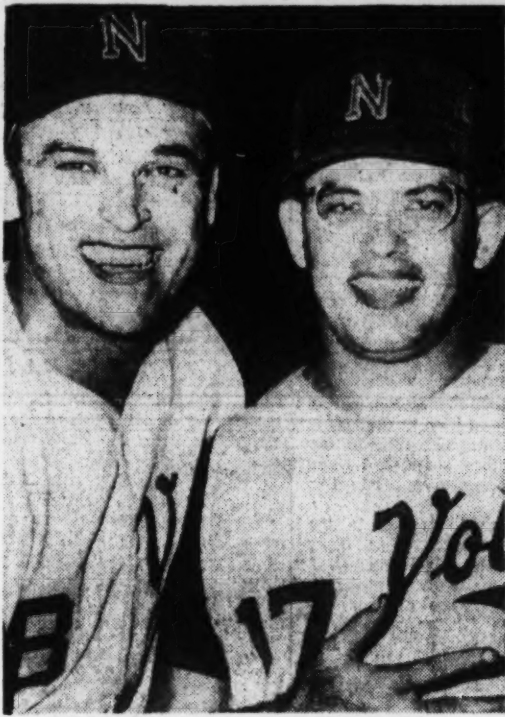

The Crackers and Mobile Bears will play a five-inning exhibition under the proposed rules here July 21 before the regular game that night. Such games will not count in the standings.

Hurth said that the possibility of the Crackers moving into AAA company was discussed but was not brought up by Mann or anyone else officially.

He said that no representative from Shreveport, regarded as the city most likely to take over the New Orleans franchise in event the Pelicans fold, was present. But, he added, Shreveport officials are still interested in gaining a Southern franchise.

It was decided that Shaughnessy play-offs this year will begin one day after regular season ends—following one day of rest. Will Carruthers, baseball writer of the Memphis Press-Scimitar, was awarded a gold pass (lifetime) for league games as a reward for 25 years of service.

All Added To Excitement At Ponce De Leon Park Wednesday Night As All-Stars Rapped Crackers 4-0 To Hand Atlanta First Defeat In Southern Assn. Classic

Coles and Thorpe Twinkle As Stars Fall on Crax, 4-0

Vol and Baron Blast Homers

By CHARLIE ROBERTS

The Southern Association All-Stars took 20 years to post their first shutout over the Atlanta Crackers. And when they got around to it, they did the 4-0 chore in an hour and 37 minutes.

The nearly packed Ponce de Leon Park house of 9,742 might have felt that the 1958 All-Stars took unfair advantage of their heroes in this fastest of the two score classics Wednesday night.

Because they used an ex-Cracker and a guy who has been practicing hitting baseballs over Atlanta fences for five days to ignite all the productive fireworks.

Ex-Cracker Bob Thorpe, wearing a suit belonging to the now-league-leading Birmingham Barons, led off the second inning by powering a Bob Hartman serve over the left-field fence, a lethal wallop of 375 feet.

Nashville's bespectacled Chuck Coles bashed a three-run round tripper over the right-field signs off Bob Giggie an inning later. It was as simple as that.

Coles' homer, coming in the wake of a single by Memphis' Shep Frazier and a walk to New Orleans' Tommy Carroll with no one out, was his fourth in five days here. The classy southpaw swinger belted his others on Saturday, Monday and Tuesday as the Crackers wrestled three decisions in five days from the Vols.

That was the scoring story. The other story of note was one of great pitching by five All-Stars, who let the host team down with six hits. Nashville's Jim O'Toole gave up only a single to Mike Krsnich and a double to Ebba St. Claire in his two innings as a starter.

Chattanooga's Billy DuFour was tagged for leadoff singles in the third and fourth innings by Chuck Cottier and Ben Downs. Buck Riddle and pinch-hitting Bruce Barmes tapped Birmingham's Joe Grzenda for a pair of unproductive one-basers in the fifth.

After that the Crackers, going down to defeat for the first time in six appearances in the host role, got only one man on base as Mobile's Dick Stigman and Memphis' Bill Slack slammed the door.

Stigman issued one of two free

'Two Big Swipes --- That's the Ball Game'

By MICKEY LOGUE

"Two big swipes and that's the ball game."

Eight little words and All-Star Coach George Archie had an unprecedented victory packed in a nutshell at Ponce de Leon Park Wednesday night.

"The home run's a great thing," continued the dressing-room analyst. "If it's for you."

The broad grin the tall, balding baseball man was wearing left no doubt which side had the homers in the 20th annual All-Star Game. It wasn't the Crackers.

Birmingham's Bob Thorpe, still an Atlanta favorite despite the rival flannel, and Nashville's Chuck Coles were quick to reveal the type pitches they delivered out of Poncey.

"It was a changeup," acknowledged Thorpe. "Sure, I knew it was gone from the crack of the bat."

"I've played against Bob Hartman before in spring exhibition games," he continued. "But that's the first time I've ever faced him in a regular game."

In other words, Thorpe has taken one Southern Assn swing at the ace Cracker lefty's launchings and placed same in the left-field bullpen.

"I hit (Bob) Giggie's fast-ball," Coles said. "I figured it was gone, but I really didn't hit the ball real well. I just got a piece of the bat on it, enough to get it out."

Coles is a stocky chap with tremendous power. This strength is shown best in the 18 regular season home runs he has belted.

Cubs Up Streak To Five Whisenant Hits Pair for Reds

CHICAGO (AP) — The upstart Chicago Cubs' reached a seasonal high win streak of five Wednesday by sweeping a doubleheader from Cincinnati, 5-4 and 7-5.

It was the Cubs' second doubleheader sweep in four days. They turned this twin trick by thrilling 30,412 paid patrons with a three run ninth to snare the opener and coming back with another winning three-run spree in the eighth inning of the nightcap to send the Redlegs reeling to their sixth and seventh straight defeats.

The second game loss was a bitter one for Cincinnati since the Redlegs blasted two homers, both by Pete Whisenant, three doubles and four triples in a collection of 11 hits as Brooks Lawrence suffered his seventh setback.

Lefty Bill Henry, last of two relief pitchers to carry on for sidelined Cub starter Marcelino Solis, picked up the victory—his second against no losses.

PGA Puts Bolt On Probation; Fine Still Goes

HAVERTOWN, Pa. (AP)—The revamped Professional Golfers' Assn. Championship starts a four-day, 72-hole run Thursday with main interest riveted on the complex man of moods, Tommy Bolt.

Bolt, the sport's celebrated "Peck's Bad Boy," was placed on indefinite probation Wednesday night by the PGA's executive committee. However, he received no suspension because he agreed to make apology for any misconduct.

But before he could start his quest in the tournament's first round Thursday afternoon, he had to face a session of the executive committee. The committee upheld a $500 fine assessed against the temperamental golfer for what officials called abuse of sponsors in the recent Long Island, N.Y., tournament.

Harold Sargent, PGA president, said it was decided to let Bolt continue on tour because the golfer promised the PGA he would "uphold all of its standards."

Lester Kelly's 70 Captures Medal in State Amateur Play

Four Tied For Runner-Up

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION
ATHENS—Atlanta's Lester Kelly thumbed his nose at the three years that have elapsed since he last played the Athens Country Club course, and Wednesday nailed down medalist honors in the qualifying round of the Georgia Amateur Tournament with a two under-par 70.

As captain of Georgia's 1955 Bulldogs, Lester won the SEC and SIC crown and led the Bulldogs to a conference championship. That was the last time he played over the Athens course. Incidentally, in that 1955 tourney, the stubby Atlantan missed by one stroke tying an all-time, two-round record. He turned in a pair of 68s to miss Billy Maxwell's record 135 by one stroke. Considering the condition of the greens now due to bad weather, his 70 was probably a sharper performance than that 1955 feat. Bunched behind Kelly with 72s were two high school hot-shots, a current member of the Georgia Amateur and Atlanta and Gene Beard of Elberton at 73.

Jimmy Gabrielsen, son of Georgia swimming coach Bump Gabrielsen, and Billy Gibson, an ex-Athens High player now living in Macon, were the preppers who matched strokes with Cobby Ware of Augusta and Gene Hay, Decatur native who played for Howell Hollis and Georgia in 1951.

Even-up with par 72s were Bob Moser, another Georgia varsity man, and two local entries, Edsel Benson and Griffin Moody of Athens. Hugh Royer of Columbus and the university was tied with Bob White of Savannah, Charles Harrison of Atlanta and Gene Beard of Elberton at 73.

Prepper Jimmy Allen of Athens and Atlanta's Tommy Barnes carded 74s as did Amos Martin of Washington, low man on the senior division totem-pole.

Pass Pills, Porpoise, Salmon's Sunburned

By CHARLES ELLIOTT
Constitution Outdoor Columnist

Since I first heard the news, I've been worried about those sunburned fish. Salmon and porpoises and whales that get blistered from the solar rays is such a sizable problem that I scouted around and got myself up a few people to help me worry about it.

But we didn't seem able to find a solution. One guy pointed out that we get only the sunburned salmon in cans—he could tell by the color—but that observation didn't contribute anything but a touch of indignation. Since the deficiency of nicotinic acid in a salmon's system seems to be a contributing factor, much study was devoted to how the salmon tribe might be taught to smoke. That would help the fish, the folks in our tobacco belt, and give Reader's Digest editors the ulcers.

We weren't getting anywhere until Bud Moseley came up with a new idea—"Give 'em pills!"

You may not believe this, but people take pills for sunburn. Why shouldn't they? We have pills for almost everything else, except old age. And now some outfit has come up with a concoction that will allow you to get a summer tan without the danger or discomfort of becoming fried or baked in the process.

Bud seemed to know all about it, so I cornered him in the back of my favorite tackle shop and pumped him for information that I found so interesting, I figured it should be passed along.

Charles Elliott

It's possible that a lot of weekend vacations could be much less painful by the use of sunburn pills.

I didn't even know why a person gets sunburned until Bud Moseley told me. It's because your stratum lucidum is not thick enough. I didn't understand that either, so he explained that the stratum lucidum is a layer between the outer and inner layers of your skin. Folks with fair skin are not blessed with enough of this protective layer and the solar rays burn right on through to the bottom layer of your hide.

When you expose your skin to the sun's rays, your best protection is your store of melanocytes, which are the cells that produce and hold the dark pigments in your skin. These melanocytes—I had to look that up, too—are provided by nature to keep a person who spends much time in the sun, from getting cooked all the way through.

If you live indoors, your skin doesn't need them, so being human, they sit back and relax, glad of the opportunity to get out of work. When you suddenly expose your white skin to the sun, the melanocytes can't get cranked up fast enough to give you the protection you need.

The pills you take, called Meloxine, to guard you against sunburn or blister, artificially stimulate the melanocytes. This shot in the arm puts them to work in a hurry and within a couple of hours, a normal person can take on a reasonable amount of sunlight without being cooked. But a word of caution—if you are like me, you may not be quite up to normal, so it's best to talk with your doctor before you take on a mess of these chemicals.

Back to the fish. We've still got a problem. How are you ever going to explain to them about melanocytes?

To Keep Frisco Near Lead

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Smashing 14 hits off five Philadelphia hurlers, the San Francisco Giants smothered the Philadelphia Phils, 9-2, Wednesday as Willie Mays burst out of his batting slump with two singles and a double.

The victory kept the Giants hot on the heels of the league-leading Milwaukee Braves who had to win Wednesday night to maintain their one-half game margin.

Southpaw Johnny Antonelli, given a four-run cushion in the second inning, joined the small group of National League pitchers who have 10 victories this year.

He gave up nine hits, but kept them well spaced and wasn't pressed.

Jack Sanford, rookie of the year for 1957, allowed the four runs in the second before being relieved. He suffered his eighth pitching setback against six victories.

COOK AND CARLTON
FIRE PERFECT GAME

Valentine Motors' Jimmy Cook and Benny Carlton pitched a perfect game Wednesday night, whipping Smyrna, 12-0, in a City League contest.

The two right-handers faced the minimum 27 batters, striking out 20 and didn't allow a single ball into the outfield. Six ground balls were hit to the infield, and the first baseman stopped a line drive.

Cook, 155, worked the first four innings and fanned seven. Carlton, 175, went the final five, whiffing 13 as 27 straight Smyrnaites failed to hit safely.

Meanwhile Hoyt Scott, Don Sparrow and Tommy Scott were battering the opposition for most of Valentine's 13 hits. Scott, 3-3, had two RBI, Sparrow, 2-5, had one and Tommy Scott parlayed two doubles into four RBI.

Elsewhere around the loop, Jackson Loan nabbed its 11th win without defeat as Simmons Service fell, 10-4. Shurbutt Service nipped East Atlanta, 2-1, and Hapeville tripped Northside, 3-2.

was safe. Ed Ohlinger thought he was out. Ohlinger was umpiring. So he was out.

Buck Riddle led off the fifth by singling off Grzenda. He rambled to second as Dillard let the ball get through him, but overestimated himself with a try for third. Dillard threw him out.

Barmes, the next batter up, singled sharply to right, the last Atlanta hit.

Shep Frazier, Coles and Thorpe divided six of the nine All-Star safeties equally, but the homers by Thorpe and Coles were all that was needed.

Harman and Giggie were slashed for seven of the nine hits in the first two frames. And they accounted for five of the strikeouts.

Ken MacKenzie hurled a hitless fifth. Jim Umbricht was punched only for singles by Memphis' Eddie Irons and Mobile's Don Dillard in three full scoreless, walkless innings.

Then Charlie Gorin fired a hitless ninth, although he did walk Nashville's Buddy Gilbert with one man out.

The early innings were played under angry, gloowering skies. And as light rain began to fall, the teams rushed through the fourth and fifth innings to be sure the game would be officially finished in event heavier rains came.

Sparkling double plays got Cracker hurlers out of tight spots on three occasions, and the All-Stars have one twin killing in the game that produced its share of tie fielding.

The All-Stars, winning for the fourth consecutive time, evened the series with host teams at 10 triumphs each. And the host team was blanked for only the second time. Birmingham lost a 10-0 decision to the glitter boys in 1955.

The Crackers posed only two real scoring threats, and the partisan audience was convinced they talked once. But Mr. Umpire said "Uh, Uh."

ALL STAR BITS—Starter and winner Jim O'Toole modestly said he was merely lucky. "I just threw four curves," said the talented Nashville southpaw. "The last one was a terrific low one (and Mike) Krsnich drilled it past third. I stuck to the fast ball from then on." Asked to elaborate on the other Star pitchers, O'Toole said: "Everybody did just right. They got the ball over the plate and got 'em out. That isn't the first game Chuck Coles ever helped win either." Jim Umbricht, who pitched creditably for the Crackers, said he played against Coles several times last season. "He's pulling the ball more now than when he played for Albuquerque," Umbricht said, "but he was dangerous then."

Mobile's Dick Stigman said the rain-spattered ball bothered him some (but apparently not much) . . . Memphis catcher Eddie Irons praised Joe Grzenda's curve ball. Grzenda, Chattanooga's Billy DuFour and Stigman all got an "A" for control from Irons. "I'd have pitched Grzenda more," Sisler said, "but he has a bad foot and Cal Ermer asked me not to use him but an inning."

Bob Thorpe attributed Birmingham's collapse against the Crackers last week to age. "We have a lot of veterans on the team, and veterans get tired, but they come back. I think the race will be between the three clubs that are up there now, Birmingham, Atlanta and Mobile."

nine at Sulphur Dell's friendly right target and nine on the road. He admitted he rather hated to pull out of Atlanta, where the Vols had just finished a five-game pre-All Star series.

"I've had four homers since we've been here," he said, "and three were off of Giggie."

There was another equally decisive side of the Stars' first triumph over the Crackers in six tries.

"Whew! What a pitching staff."

Triumphant Manager Dick Sisler said it. The Nashville pilot, who last season managed the host team, added:

"I'd sure like to have that bunch of pitchers."

Pressed for the best of the hurlers, Sisler said, "I'd hate to have to pick. All of 'em were wonderful."

He added, "Don't forget those home runs. Coles and Thorpe's hitting probably were the key individual factors in the game. That ball Coles hit set them back on their heels."

"It gave us a tremendous lift, and hurt the opposition. We might have had to play the game differently without the home runs," Sisler said with a grin.

"When the Cracker pitchers laid it in there, I told 'em to hit it once we were ahead. I didn't want to run them too much on that wet ground. There's too much chance of injury."

Market Gain Cut By World News

But the List Still Achieves Moderate Average Advance

NEW YORK (AP)—A strong stock market rise faltered as the international news worsened but the list still managed a moderate advance on average.

Vigorous early trading and a pickup late in the day boosted volume to 3,240,000 shares, the biggest since 3,950,000 shares changed hands Jan. 16. It compared with 3,090,000 shares Tuesday.

A continued advance by oils, both international and domestic, was chilled by news that Russia had demanded the United States pull its Marines out of Lebanon. The oils converted plus to minus signs along a broad front and other issues reacted in sympathy.

The day was marked by a strong upturn in aircraft which still held fair gains by the close.

The aircraft paced a rise by "war babies" generally as other issues unrelated to defense fared indifferently.

Five of the 15 most active stocks were aircraft and four were oils.

Cotton Rises On Mideast

NEW YORK (U)—Cotton futures closed 30 cents a bale lower to $1.40 a bale higher.

Strength in distant 1959 crop deliveries was again a feature and was predicated on the belief the Mideast situation may shelve farm legislation this year. Gains in distant positions extended to $2.10 a bale, but half of the advance was later lost on profit taking.

Current crop months were off 85 cents as 65 cents a bale around midday, but when profit taking and hedging lifted, those deliveries recovered partially.

The weather in the cotton belt was generally favorable.

Atlanta Produce

On the Atlanta fruit and vegetable market trading was rather slow Wednesday morning as reports continued heavy prices showed very little change, according to the A.M. Watermelon market weak with supplies very heavy; some of the first Elberta peaches of the season were offered packed bulk in bushel crates.

Bananas remained scarce. Watermelons and large lot sales at 10 to 15 cents each for various varieties. Peaches still ranged 1.00 to 1.20 per bushel, according to variety, size and quality with most fairly good small to medium stock at 2.00 to 2.50 per bushel. Georgia cantaloupes jobbed 1.25 to 1.50 bulk per bushel with some poorer grades at 1.00.

Corn was slightly easier, yellow sold 20-25 and white 20-25 cents dozen; crates of good yellow and white 5 dozen white 2.00 to 2.50 and sacks of 5 dozen white 1.50 to 2.00. Cabbage was in lighter supply but mostly unchanged at 50 to 1.15 per bag, most stock went at 70-90 cents in job lots. Irish potatoes from Florida, Alabama and North Carolina were mostly unchanged at 1.00 to 1.50 per 50-pound bag; some best round Reds were 1.60 to 1.75 and high as 2.00 for best Alabama stock with poorer round Whites low as 1.00. Local eight-quart tomatoes brought 1.50, very few best hammers, ordinary to 1.00 to 1.25 and poorer 50-75 cents. Georgia round green beans sold generally 1.50 to 2.00 per bushel and poles 1.75 to 2.00, with few higher. North Carolina poles were 2.00 to 2.50, best 3.00, and Alabama poles mostly 2.00.

Georgia yellow crookneck squash was unchanged at 75-90, according to quality, with most fairly good squash 1.25 to 1.50; okra was still quoted at wide range of prices from 2.00 to 3.00, mostly 2.00, with poorer and large mostly 1.00 to 1.50. Georgia eggplant brought 1.50 to 2.00, and North Carolina large bell peppers 2.00 to 2.50. Georgia butterbeans were 1.50 to 2.25, mostly 2.00 for white and 2.00 to 2.50 for some colored. Butterbeans were 1.00 to 1.50; green cowpeas 1.00 to 1.50 and purple hull cowpeas from Georgia and Alabama 1.00 to 1.50. Few North Carolina cucumbers in bushel crates were 1.50 to 2.00. Georgia stock ranged 1.50 to 2.50 per bushel, with some large low as 1.00. Greens were very slow as dozen bunches brought 1.00 to 1.25, mostly 1.00, and turnip greens 75-90 bushel; turnips and mustard greens were too scarce to quote. Some Georgia William red onions packed in bushel baskets, fair quality 2.00, and up were offered at 2.25 to 3.50 per bushel.
